SILENCE REIGNS IN THE COAL FIELDS

AS WAGE EARNERS WALK OUT-- INDUSTRY ON VACATION

Greatest Fuel Strike In Years

—Is Now On In The Anthracite Region of Pennsylvania, Price of Black Diamonds May Be Raised In This Community As a Result of The Labor Troubles.

Anthracite operators Tuesday night emphasized the need to insist "that a settlement of the suspension beginning Tuesday shall include measures for avoiding future strikes."

W. W. Inglis, in a statement to this effect, which he made public in Scranton as chairman of the anthracite operators' scale committee, assailed the action of the mine workers in stopping work because no contract had been negotiated to replace the one which expired Tuesday midnight.

Operations should have gone on while negotiations were pending, as the operators had "over and over again proposed," said Inglis. "The idea that the miners cannot work unless they have a contract," he said, "is unsupported by reason or practice."

"Hundreds of thousands of workers in every class of employment," according to Inglis, "continued at work after contracts expired in the certainty that sooner or later new ones would be made."

"John L. Lewis will not permit the miners to do this," he said. "That is why we have a strike; it is not because there is no other course. It is because a strike is the only course he is willing to adopt."

A settlement now should accordingly be a settlement for all time, he said.

Hard coal operators, in informal discussion Tuesday of the conference of John Hays Hammond with President Coolidge, at Swampscott, Massachusetts on the coal situation, took issue with some of Hammond's reported proposals. They did not believe the government should take over and operate mines in time of industrial conflict, as Hammond was reported to have advised the president to urge upon congress.

"If men won't work," these operators said, "even the government could not run the mines. If the men will work, the operators can run them satisfactorily without the government."

The operators spoke personally and not officially for their group as a whole. They favored recommendations President Coolidge himself enunciated on the basis of the report of the coal commission of 1923, of which Hammond was chairman. The president wished authority to appoint a commission to deal with emergencies along the line of conciliation and voluntary arbitration to adjust controversies when collective bargaining failed, and to prevent profiteering thru the control of distribution.

At the same time a movement was reported under way Tuesday among various union groups in the region to revive the question of nationalization of coal mines. Backers of the movement, it was said, wished to continue along the line taken by the nationalization committee appointed by the United Mine Workers of America several years ago.

The entrance of the Fairmont and Baltimore Coal and Coke Co., mine at Adamston, West Virginia, was wrecked by an explosion. No one was injured. The company reopened the pit for operations a week ago under a separate wage agreement with its employees.

VIOLET GINDER WON FIRST PRIZE IN STATE CONTEST

Subject of Essay, "The Reasons I Would Give To My Younger Brothers And Sister For Letting Cigarets Alone"—That Which Destroys America's Youth, Destroys Her Future.

Miss Violet Ginder, of Darbyville, enjoys the distinction of being the first person in Pickaway county to win the first prize of ten dollars in a state essay contest.

The subject of Miss Ginder's essay was, "The Reasons I Would Give To My Younger Brothers and Sisters for Letting Cigarets Alone," and was as follows:

"By the use of cigarettes we are breaking the laws of nature, first as criminals break the laws of the government.

While one is smoking a cigaret he is doing seven things, which are as follows:

- 1—Wasting money.
- 2—Forming deleterious affects on body, mind and religious attitudes.
- 3—Endangering property.
- 4—Decreasing his social standing by indifference to common courtesy.
- 5—Acquiring an unsanitary habit.
- 6—Imposing on the personal liberty of non-users.
- 7—Shortening his life.

When we realize that in the United States over six and a quarter billion cigarettes are manufactured and sold in one month we know some one is getting wealthy as a result of our ignorance.

The money spent for cigarettes is for no real benefit but to satisfy the distress aroused by its previous use and to poison the system. Money that is spent in this manner is soon burned up in smoke, with no benefit to anyone except the manufacturers; while if it had been given to a charity cause someone would have received the real good with injury to no person's health.

The effects of cigarettes are wholly disease producing. No matter how you use them, they show upon the constitution.

Cigarets injure the heart by clogging the passages, reduces the bodily eliminations and makes normality impossible. This produces paralysis, insanity and other physical disorders. By contracting the passages of the kidneys, cigarettes impair the health and happiness of men. Cancer of the lip and tongue are most usually caused by excessive use of cigarettes.

Cigarets hinder the development of body and mind in younger persons and impair the efficiency of older ones.

Nicotine stupefies the brain, which results in low scholarship. An Ohio superintendent reported that 96 percent of the boys who fail in school are indulgers of tobacco. Students who smoke are not recommended by faculty members as high school teachers. Today boys learn to use cigarettes much earlier in life than in former years. Consequently more boys who have the opportunity to get an education now are not as successful as they were in the previous generation.

As the use of cigarettes increases, the desire to go to church decreases. Users of tobacco in any form care little for the church, charity organizations, or the spiritual good of individuals, altho some who do not use it excessively have minor relations with religious departments.

Boys and girls of today are citizens and parents of tomorrow, and unless they guard against the use of cigarettes the coming generation will be weakened physically, mentally and morally.

A young man while waiting at a station for a train, carelessly threw away a lighted cigaret, which caught fire to a little boy's fuzzy coat. The child would have soon been fatally burned, had it not been for the heroism of a young girl who extinguished the blaze.

Statistics show that the property loss caused by lighted cigarettes amounts to many millions of dollars each year, while the total death rate from such fires reaches a high mark in the thousands.

Good manners will take one a long distance in the world. Cigarettes makes boys impolite. An illustration:

A young boy, who was a heavy smoker, drove a car up in front of a house and stopped. He gave a shrill whistle. Just then the door opened, and a beautiful young girl ran down to the waiting car. Her escort, still smoking, did not open the door or assist her into the machine, but, half lying down in the car, went speeding down the street.

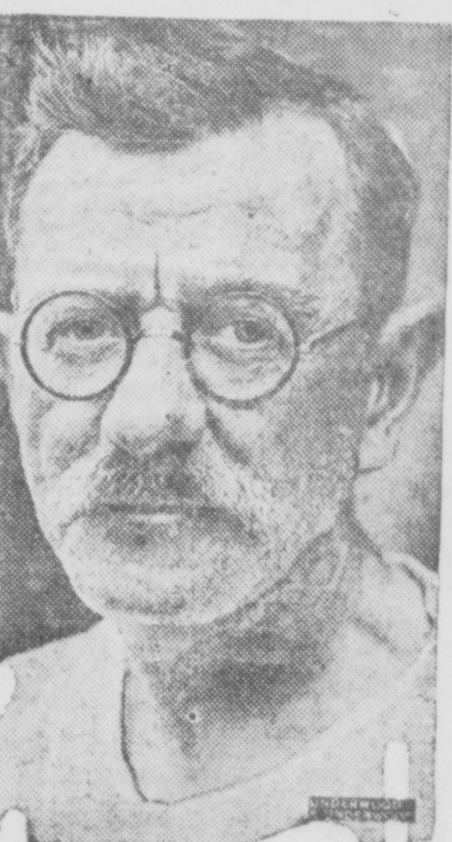

Cigarettes make men thoughtless, careless, sluggish of body and indifferent to morality and courtesy. In reality, men get drunk on nicotine, which effects their conduct very much like liquor. The cigaret business is anarchistic in character, for indulgers have little regard for law. Leopold and Loeb, the most heartless murderers of all time, were both cigaret fiends. Your social life is due to your ability to be courteous. If a youth, in the prime of life, is indifferent to common courtesy in his social career, he will be so in his business career.

The nasty habit affords a way for spreading germs. The finger ends turn yellow as a result of coming into contact with the nicotine that the cigaret paper contains. If it affects the fingers in this manner, what will it do for our heart and lungs?

Christians have an unwritten law which clearly states that what offends the weak, should not be practiced by anyone who thinks he has the spirit of Christ in him. Cigaret fiends are downright selfish and obnoxious.

BOOTERY
104 E MAIN ST.KEEP RURAL LIFE CLEANVigorous Grange Leadership
Exerts Wholesome Influence
In Vital Ways.

There is much significance in the action of the executive committee of the New York Grange in the steps just taken relative to one phase of the big State fair at Syracuse. Learning that application had been made to the fair commission to allow a prize fight in the new coliseum on the grounds, the executive committee of the State Grange immediately met and passed a formal resolution, asking the fair commission to deny the use of the buildings and grounds for any such purpose, as being wholly contrary to the principles for which the state fair is designed, and likewise in violation of the highest ideals of the rural people of the Empire State.

This action is in line with the general policy of the Grange in behalf of clean entertainment, and such policy it exemplifies in the administration of its own halls throughout the United States. All Grange programs and entertainment features are maintained on the highest possible moral plane and when dances and social functions are conducted in Grange halls they are very closely supervised; when made public at all, tickets of admission are frequently issued so that no objectionable parties can secure admission. By this policy the environment which the Grange seeks to put around its young people in the country is kept at the maximum of wholesomeness, and very great service to the rural welfare is being constantly rendered by the Grange in this respect.

Striving toward similar ideals, Granges, as a rule, far from their fairs all events, games of chance and similar projects calculated to mislead or defraud patrons of such attractions. In this respect the Grange has set a good example, even to churches, and is in line with the recognized Grange policy relative to agricultural and county fairs, in which the organization demands a high standard of attractions, protesting everything of objectionable and catch-penny kind.

The Trusting Sex

"Well, dear," said Mrs. Jones, as her husband one evening dragged himself wearily up the porch steps and sat down with a sigh in his favorite rocker, "how did things go at the office today?" Mr. Jones sighed again, and fanned himself with his straw hat as he replied, absent-mindedly, "They didn't go well. They didn't go well. They didn't go well at all. I had a ninety-three and I should have had a ninety-two."

Mrs. Jones smiled. "Ninety-two orders in one day," she cooed. "I wouldn't call that bad for a beginner!"

Another Solemn Thought
Lost time is never found again.HAIR CUT AND DYE
FOOLED SHERIFFUnwittingly Talked With Man He Hunted.

New York.—The police circular gave a minute description of the fugitive and called particular attention to his most prominent characteristic, a head of bushy iron gray hair. "He is cultured, with agreeable manners," said the circular, "and being fastidious he usually makes his home in first-class hotels." The fugitive was a notorious forger who had been passing bad checks in the South.

"We were hot on the fellow's trail," said a deputy sheriff from a southern state, "when he suddenly dropped out of sight as if the earth had swallowed him. Though I had never seen him, I had a recent photograph of him and I was sure I would recognize him. When word came he was in a certain city I repaired there without delay and spent my time hanging about the lobbies of the best hotels. Every time I saw a man with a good head of hair I would scrutinize him closely. My quarry, however, failed to put in an appearance, and I began to fear my quest would end in failure when word reached me that my man had been apprehended in a nearby city."

Didn't Recognize Him.

"When I arrived there I went immediately to police headquarters. When I saw him I gasped. Instead of having a bushy head of iron gray hair he had smooth brown hair which was closely cropped and parted in the middle. I consulted the circular and the photograph and told myself I would not have recognized him from either."

"Are you sure you've got the right man?" I asked.

"Sure, he's the right man," they said. "We've made his acquaintance before. He had his hair cut, dyed it, and smoothed it down with grease."

"He told me afterward he had stood beside me at a hotel desk while I was asking the clerk if they had a guest with a big crop of bushy iron gray hair."

The case is not unusual. The police have long known that fugitives resort to all manner of disguises to throw them off the track. A good many thieves bear ineffaceable scars of battle on chin, cheek and throat. They realize that such marks may prove to be their undoing and try to hide them. A mustache will sometimes hide a scarred lip and a beard will conceal a tell-tale throat.

Police circulars are frequently posted in small-town railroad stations and buildings. The fugitive often thus comes face to face with his own likeness. It is common for him to dye his hair, and in some cases to stain his face so that he becomes dark instead of fair. Bald-headed criminals frequently wear toupees or wigs.

Dress for Parts.

Professional criminals, like actors, dress for the parts they play. The bogus physician affects the airs of a member of the medical fraternity; the confidence man endeavors to look like a prosperous broker or banker; the card-sharp assumes the manners of a well-dressed man of leisure. None of them want to look like crooks, but nevertheless the majority, especially burglars and hold-up men, look their role. Few of them spend their gains on a wardrobe. The majority of them, according to the police, either gamble or spend their money entertaining women. A large number of the thieves and hold-up men who fall into the police net are rough and poorly clad. If they have been following their calling any length of time it is stamped on their faces. They are hard of countenance and cold of eye.

Detectives traditionally disguise themselves if they believe it will help them in their work. They are frequently assigned to cover weddings and receptions where they mingle with the guests. Then they wear the same conventional garments that other guests wear. If they are assigned to visit rough places they clothe themselves in coarse clothes and go unshaven for days. When two such detectives appear at a police station they resemble vagabonds so closely that were it not for the credentials they carry their acquaintances would scarcely recognize them.

Famous Cemetery of
Pioneer West Passes

Los Angeles, Cal.—Latest of the famous landmarks of the Southwest to be moved down by the sickle of progress in the old Cavalry cemetery here which played a part in the early history of the region. Not since 1893 has a funeral cortege passed through the cemetery's gates.

An ordinance passed recently requires the removal of all bodies buried there.

Known among the old-timers as the Buena Vista cemetery, the burial ground occupies more than ten acres and entombs some of the most distinguished figures in the Spanish colonial history of southern California.

Negligence in the care of the graves has resulted in the gradual advance of ruin. Tombstones that once stood in sober dignity have crumbled, while weeds have grown knee deep over the plots.

Some Cherry Tree

Yakima, Wash.—William G. Martin, a rancher near Wapato, Wash., has one Royal Ann cherry tree which this year yielded a crop of 1,000 pounds of fruit. Fifty other trees in his orchard yielded an average of 700 pounds.

The popular jabot takes on softer and fluffier frills as the season of autumn frocks approaches. The collar, with its jabot ends, adds a charming bit of decoration to the one-piece street frock or tailored suit.

Properly Fitted Gloves
Sure to Give Service

The saleswoman at the glove counter no longer says, "What size, please?" nowadays; instead she carefully measures your hand and then produces the proper-sized glove for it. Nevertheless, the thoughtful shopper likes to know what the process is which enables her to do so—every woman wants to know what size glove she wears!

Your kid gloves come in quarter sizes from 5 1/2 to 8 1/2, and you get them with fingers long, or short, or medium. You should get your fabric glove about a half size larger than you do the kid ones, since the cloth gloves have practically no "stretch" to them. Misses' gloves come in the same sizes as women's gloves do. Men's range from 6 3/4 to 10. And children's gloves can be had from 0000 to 7.

Don't make the mistake of insisting upon the size you "have been wearing," when the saleswoman suggests another. Particularly if your old glove is torn or split, there is evidence that the new one should be selected according to the size of the hand—not according to the size of the worn-out glove.

It seems that women have a tendency to buy too small gloves. And it is for this reason that the "French" system of glove sizes, rather than the "American" system that has been described, is sometimes used; for this "French" system, also called the "blind" system, because the chances are that the customer will not understand it, eliminates the probability that the customer will insist on buying a size too small for her.

However, if you do find the "American" system of glove sizes in use, remember these points when you are tempted to insist on having your "regular size." In the first place, gloves differ so greatly in elasticity that a size right for you in one kind of material may be quite wrong in another.

Again, different makes of gloves run differently in sizes. Then, it's not impossible for your hand to grow, you know! Just because you once wore a size 6 1/2 glove is no reason that you always should. And, finally, don't think you can settle the matter of glove sizes merely by holding the back of the glove up to the back of your hand; for the glove must not only fit the width of your hand, but its bulk also.

Remember that a too small glove does not minimize the size of the hand. It simply splits out rapidly, and so is a costly purchase.

Capes Are Featured in Early Autumn Fashions

Every fashion report emphasizes the importance of capes and, in the advance collections shown for early fall, wraps of this type are conspicuously featured.

Almost overnight they have dawned upon fashion's horizon and even in the modes of the hour the cape in its varied and interesting interpretations has a place of exceptional prominence.

The transparent wrap, which may be a coat but quite as often is a cape, is one of the essentials of a wardrobe and whether it forms part of an ensemble or has been designed to accompany a frock of different material it is to be found in practically every notable collection of new models.

The triple cape of black satin launched recently has been a huge success and has inspired other models rather similar in type. One of these is fashioned of heavy brown crepe de chine, each cape laid in fine plaits which are held in at the bottom with a band of the material. The revers are faced with crepe de chine in a tone of pale beige.

A model of this type is adapted to many materials. It would be most effective in black or navy georgette or in lighter chiffons to match the frock underneath. And if one desired to carry out the color scheme the cape might be of deep violet crepe with the dress in a shade several tones lighter.

The Vogue of Red

A smart costume which reflects the popularity of red consists of a jumper of red flat crepe worn with a plaited skirt of red and white printed silk and topped by a knee-length coat of red kasha lined with the same silk. A hat of red bangkok and a red and white scarf complete an effective ensemble.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

The Evidences of Regeneration

By a unanimous vote of the plantation hands one Henry Johnson was held to be the wickedest man on the place. He shot craps, he had served a year on the chain-gang for swining a wicked razor, and, generally, lived a wild, free, reckless life. Accordingly, there was rejoicing at Zion church when word spread that Henry at last had seen the light and had been converted.

The revival meeting whereat he had been redeemed culminated one Sunday in a grand baptizing on Goose creek. Henry had an eight-mile tramp to reach the appointed spot. When he started from his cabin after breakfast he stowed a dozen cold biscuits in the front of shirt, meaning to refresh himself on the way. But in his newborn exaltation he actually forgot to eat.

A great host was gathered on the creek bank, and, at his appearance, loud hallelujahs arose in a fervent chorus. The preacher laid hands on Henry and, aided by two of the deacons, escorted him to the middle of the stream where the water was waist-deep. As the clergyman, pronouncing the words of the ritual, immersed Henry deeply in the water the lowermost button of Henry's shirt slipped from its buttonhole and rapidly, one by one, four huge cold biscuits arose to the surface and went bobbing down the current.

"Oh, Lordy, parson, dip 'im ag'in—dip 'im ag'in, in de Lord's name! His sins is comin' up in lumps!"

Can Be Applied by the Farmer at Any Time.

A method of seed treatment to prevent taint or stinking smut in wheat where the fungicide is applied dry has been found which not only permits the treating of the seed dry, but at the same time does not destroy any of the viability of seed. It also prevents infection of the seed in the soil. This method enables the farmer to treat his seed wheat during slack time and have it ready when needed. The fungicide used is powdered copper carbonate.

Fairly Pure Material.

Copper carbonate used should be fairly pure containing more than 50 per cent copper. It is a fine dry powder, light green in color, never blue unless impure. It is not soluble in water so does not get sticky when on grain in storage. It should be very fine, 90 per cent should pass through a 200-mesh screen.

This powdered copper carbonate is dusted on the wheat seed. Being a very fine dust it adheres to the seed, giving a thin coating of the fungicide that prevents infection from the smut or other fungus. Treatment at the rate of two ounces of good copper carbonate to the bushel of clean seed gives immunity. A heaping tablespoon of copper carbonate weighs approximately one ounce. There are machines available on the market or home-made contrivances can be used.

Treat Seed in Open.

When treating seed with this method it should be done in the open, or the operator should wear a dust mask or wet sponge over his mouth and nose, as the copper carbonate dust will cause nausea if it gets into the throat.

Seed treated with copper carbonate can be stored after treating. The dust does not absorb water, nor does it injure the seed. Seed so treated is not swelled and no allowance needs to be made at drilling time for swelling. In fact, due to increased viability caused by this treatment, less seed than normal should be used.—Waldo Kidder, Extension Agronomist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Chicken Mites Numerous
During the Hot Season

The summer time brings with it our greatest trouble with chicken mites. If they once get a start it is usually a long fight to get the best of them. They can be prevented in getting a start, however, with regular spraying of the poultry house once a week. Any good contact sprays such as the various sheep dips, crude oil, a mixture of carbolic acid and kerosene, or any of the coal tar products are good. The solution you buy in the can is usually designated as a stock solution. In making up a spray mixture for mites 3 per cent or three parts of this stock solution is used to 97 per cent or 97 parts of water. This strength is sufficient to keep down mites. If the mites once get a start it may be necessary to use as strong as 10 per cent solution.

Male and Female Rouen Ducks Are Much Unlike

The Rouen duck is the most beautiful of all ducks, and the dark Muscovy next handsonest. The latter are of blue body, green back, white tail, white band about the neck, deep red face and yellow legs, and both sexes are alike. But the Rouen, male and female, are distinctly unlike. The duck is a bright red and brown, feathers penciled evenly with black, red bill, and two transverse stripes of white and black on the wings. The drake has a green head and bill, a white neck band, brown breast, blue underbody, green back, white tail, bars of white, black and brown on under tip of wings, with reddish yellow feet.

Best Feed for Hogs

Pigs turned on soy beans when the pods are filled receive sufficient protein without the addition of a supplement. Permanent pasture is not in the same class with rape, rye or soy beans, but is much better than no pasture. Lespedeza is one of the clovers and is a splendid pasture while it lasts. It is possible to have pasture every month in the year and this system is necessary for the most economical pork production.

Cost of Screening Barn

The cost of screening the barn is more than paid for by the increased production. When the cows are free from flies they can devote their energy to production. If screening cannot be done, spraying with some cheap but effective fly repellent should precede the milking process, whenever possible. Care should be taken, however, not to get any of the spray into the milk, because of the disagreeable odor and taste it will impart.

Care and Feed for Calf

An important thing is to keep the buckets or other utensils from which the calf is fed scrupulously clean at all times. The calf bucket should be washed daily. If it is allowed to get sour, scours are almost sure to follow. After weaning, grain feeding should be continued. Three or four pounds of a good grain mixture will keep it in fine condition until it is a year old and a little more grain should be fed the second year.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Might Be, You Know

A certain sour spinster always became annoyed when asked a question the answer to which she considered obvious. Thus on the last night of April last she asked the girl at the hotel desk to call her early the next morning by ringing her telephone bell in her bedroom.

"To catch a train?" asked the girl, pleasantly.

"For what other reason does one wish to be called early?"

"Sometimes one is to be queen of the May," suggested the girl, still pleasantly.

Italy's Heroes

One of the impressive features of the procession in honor of Victor Emmanuel's twenty-fifth anniversary as king of Italy, was the squad of 50 "Garibaldini" who more than half a century ago fought their way with "the liberator" from Marsala to Capua. Not only in parades, but often on ordinary days one may see these picturesque old men, with their red shirts and their long white beards and frequently in white trousers, hobbling along the streets on canes, sometimes mumbling to themselves and eyeing curiously this noisy, white, modern Rome, so different from the sleepy reddish-brown city for which they offered their lives. Is the reverence which they inspire the product of a romantic legend? Perhaps. But they have a sound title to honor. They never attacked a foe weaker in arms and numbers than themselves. They never persecuted the weak. They never humiliated or mistreated a conquered foe. They never confiscated the property of the poor. Not all the younger Italians who have used violence for patriotic ends have as good a record as theirs.

The political big stick is being applied to senators who refuse to accept the world court prescription as it is handed to them by the international physicians.

GYM DANCE

"The best ever," was the verdict of all guests at the big Carnival dance at the C. A. C. Gym Tuesday night. If you missed the Carnival dance, you missed a mighty good time. The committee is to be congratulated on showing its patrons such an enjoyable evening.

The fun began at half past ten o'clock with the distributing of fancy paper hats, horns, serpentine and confetti and lasted two hours, everybody entering into the spirit of the carnival with a zest. The music, furnished by The Rhythmats and directed by Paul H. Kleinke, supplied the largest part of the evening's enjoyment with their perfect time and rhythm. The Rhythmats is one of the best dance orchestras that has ever played in the C. A. C. gym and the management has secured them for a return engagement September 26. If you were not at the dance Tuesday night you will have another opportunity of hearing this excellent orchestra on the night of September 26.

FUNNY CLOWNS

Big Crowds Attended Kellstadt and Plum Brothers
Show on North Court.

A show put on by the Kellstadt and Plum Brothers Tuesday in the former's back yard on North Court street, before a large and enthusiastic audience of one hundred children and adults, was quite a big success.

The principal performers included: Charles Plum, master of ceremonies; John and Billy Kellstadt and their rope jumping dog, Alexander the Great. Ned and Dick Plum, real Indian warriors; Paul Wallace and Frederick Colville and their educated ponies, Prince and Ginger; Robert Rooney with his wire walking South American parrot; Junior Dunlap and his Mountain Shepherd dog, Emperor Joseph; Happy Hilliard, John Mason and Morris Leist, the clowniest of clowns; to say nothing of Starkey's white donkey which somehow would separate itself and riders from the parade only to join the procession later, appearing unexpectedly from an alley or side street.

All in all, a real circus was staged; menagerie, acrobatic stunts, funny clowns, pink lemonade and everything.

"Sure! I'll make it an even dozen for a dollar."

AMUSEMENTS

A motion picture story of a decidedly different sort is promised for the Metropolitan theater when King Vidor's "Wife of the Centaur" opens today for an engagement of two days.

Adapted from the sensational novel by Cyril Hume, the picture tells, rather than the typical love story, the story of a man with many loves; a man who hates himself for his infidelity, but who cannot resist temptation.

That every man, like the centaur of mythology, is "half man and half beast" is the theory on which Hume based his story. The "centaur" played by John Gilbert, is a romantic, picturesque figure, in whom conflicting emotions are always struggling. He holds a high idealistic love for one woman, but cannot resist the attraction of others.

Vidor has filmed the story, it is reported with remarkable fidelity to the book, and has given it a screen translation with many striking scenes and contrasts.

Eleanor Boardman and Aileen Pringle are cast in the leading feminine roles, as the two women with whom the "centaur" is in love.

The supporting cast, which is an unusually large one, contains the names of such well known players as William Haines, Betty Francisco, Philo McCullough, Jacquelin Gadsdon, Kate Price, Kate Lester, Lincoln Stedman, William Orlamond and others.

"Wife of the Centaur" was adapted to the screen by Douglas Doty. It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offering.

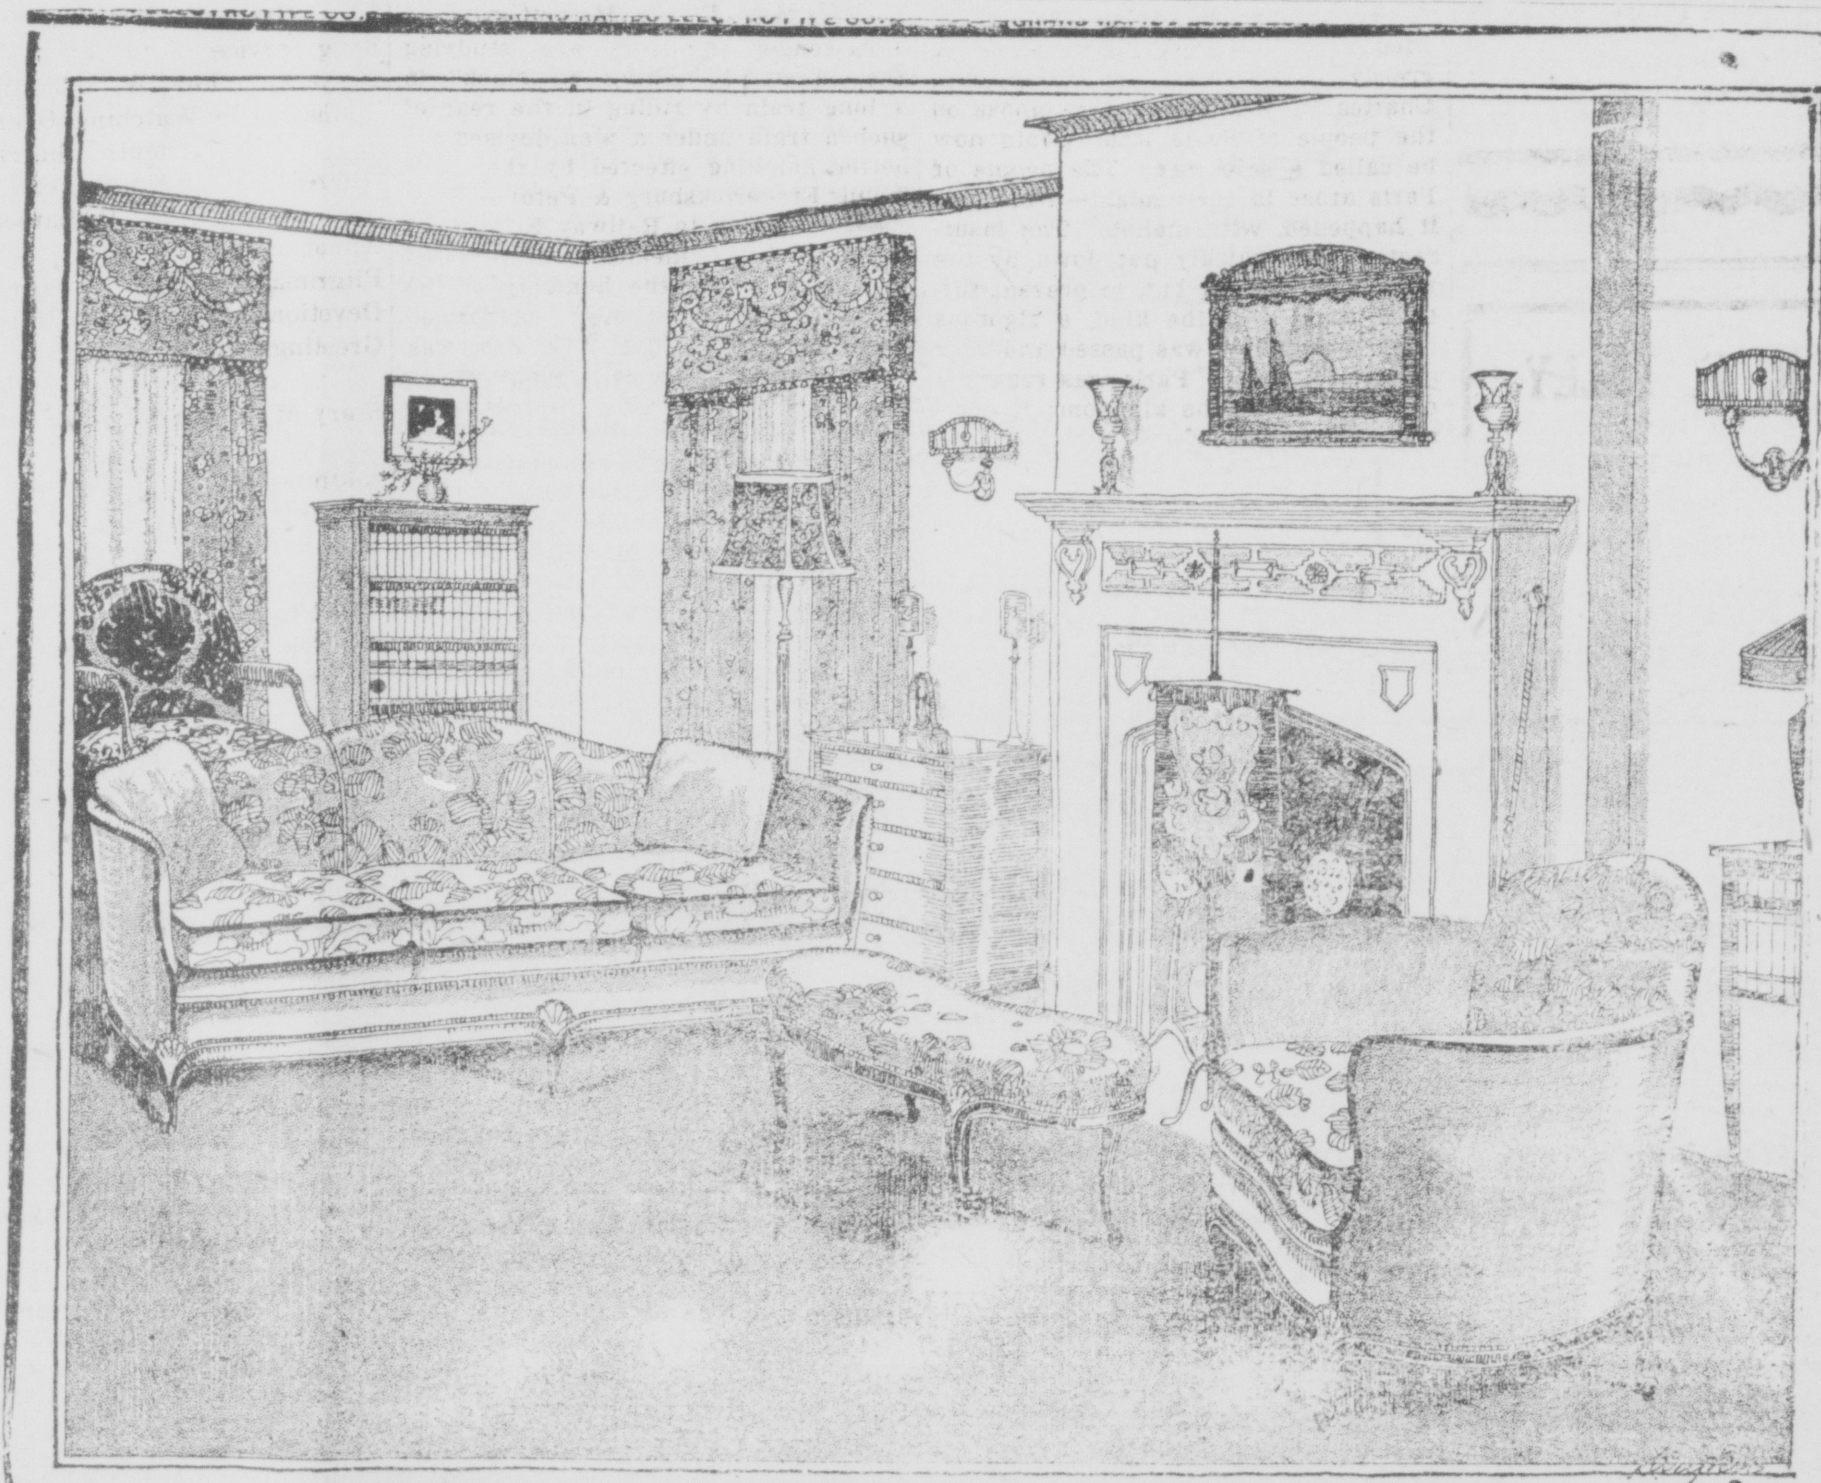

A French savant says the coming winter will be as hard as the one in 1553, and as we don't remember how bad that one was we are not going to worry about it yet.

The Missouri Farm bureau reports that all of the 1538 cars of southern Missouri strawberries marketed this year for $3,000,000 were sold thru co-operative organizations.

Sheriff Hears of Raise in Pay 30 Years Late

Edmonton, Alberta. — Notification that he had been granted a substantial advance in salary failed to arouse Sheriff Peter Gunn of Edmonton to any unusual pitch of enthusiasm. Not that he did not appreciate the liberality of his employer, but rather to the fact that he will never reap the fruit of the "increase."

The notice of his salary raise came to the sheriff in a letter from the north country written nearly thirty years ago. By some trick of fate the letter had gone astray.

It was dated January 6, 1896, and was written by Ewen MacDonald, at that time manager of the Peace river district for the Hudson's Bay company. Gunn, then comparatively young, was employed at the company's post at Lesser Slave lake.

The hardy Scotchman, MacDonald, long since dead, informs Mr. Gunn in the letter that his "services have been highly satisfactory" and that, as a result, he has been awarded a "magnificent" increase in English pounds sterling.

WON FIRST PRIZE IN STATE CONTEST

Cigarettes destroy some features in boys that distinguish them from beasts; a beast has no regard for the comfort of his kinsmen, neither has the smoker.

A tobacco user, when interviewed concerning his obnoxious habit, usually answers, "It doesn't harm me. As long as I feel like using it, no one can stop me. A person certainly has some privileges of his own in a free country." This indulger is not considering the rights of non-users and the detriment he is doing them. Isn't it disgusting, harmful, and dangerous to them?

If a person indulges in a certain activity, harms no one but himself it is called a vice, but when it begins to injure others, it is called a crime; cigarette using is a crime.

The chief reason for the abolishment of liquor was the trespassing on the personal liberty of others. Isn't tobacco just as great a public nuisance as liquor?

It is an imposition upon nonusers, as they are compelled to breathe the cigarette, cigar and pipe fumes.

A man drives a nail into his coffin every time he smokes a cigarette. Smokers die on an average from seven to eight years sooner than non-smokers. Indulgers of tobacco are committing suicide on the installment plan. Altho it does not kill instantly, it causes early death, if used for a number of years. Warren G. Harding and Charles P. Steinmetz were heavy smokers. As you remember when these two middle-aged men became sick, they had no extra heart action upon which to rely. Woodrow Wilson, a non-smoker, was seized by an ailment that brought him almost to the point of death, but in his hour of need he had a very good heart.

Tobacco smoke contains 18 or 19 poisons injurious to health, but not one beneficial element.

That which destroys America's youth, destroys her future. America's future lies in the young generation grasping the non-users' viewpoint.

All real Christians are interested in the good of all mankind, and every patriot is interested in the public good; therefore, you must stand opposed to cigarettes.

Complete Disarmament Hard to Bring About

There is nothing new under the sun; and even anti-weapon laws have been tried before—in 1382, for instance. A greedy and witless king of France, Charles VI, attempted to reimpose on the people of Paris what would now be called a sales tax. The people of Paris arose in their might—armed, as it happened, with mallets. The insurrection was quickly put down by the disciplined forces; but, to prevent further troubles of the kind, a rigorous disarmament law was passed and very strictly enforced. Paris was regarded as the pivot of the kingdom; it must not be split by internal fighting; and obviously—to the feeble mind of Charles VI—fighting would be absolutely prevented by the removal of the inhabitants' weapons.

Time passed, about 30 years. A generation of Parisians arose which knew no weapons. Then under circumstances it is not necessary to detail, a certain duke of Burgundy wished to have command of the city. It was politically impossible for him to take it by force of arms; but it was possible, as it would be nowadays, for him to engineer the election of a friend of his to the captaincy of the city. Had all the inhabitants been armed, this move would have been without effect; a captain can only command; and to order the whole body of the citizenry to fight against its own interests would be useless.

But, under the circumstances, the count de St. Pol's course was clear. One class of citizens had of necessity been exempted from the disarmament process—the butchers. The butchers had knives, axes and bludgeons galore—just as after modern disarmament plumbors would still have lots of lead pipe, and miners plenty of dynamite. And one class of citizens can usually be induced to betray the other classes for its own benefit.

So the duke of Burgundy controlled Paris, much against the desire of the Parisians at large, by means of a Parisian militia.

The powerful, but unarmed, university; and the indignant, but weaponless, population, protested violently. But it has not been recorded anywhere that their protests ever did them any good.—F. R. Buckley in Adventure Magazine.

COBRA SPITS DEATH FROM FIFTEEN FEET

Jungle Has Many Other Deadly Denizens.

To end a controversy over the death-dealing effect of a "spitting" cobra at a distance of 15 feet, C. Emerson Brown, superintendent of the Zoological gardens, is in possession of additional expert advice that upholds his contention.

"Publicity given the purchase of the deadly collection of snakes which were brought here from New York has aroused doubt in the minds of a number of persons who have informed me in writing and by telephone that they do not believe the snakes are so deadly," said Mr. Brown.

"One man wrote me he would not be afraid to face the pair of 'spitting' cobras at a distance of 15 feet, without any barriers between them. Of course, I do not believe he would, but he won't be given a chance, anyhow," added Mr. Brown.

Mr. Brown then offered a letter from Raymond Ditmars, curator of reptiles at the Bronx zoo, in New York, who is reputed to be the greatest authority on reptiles in this country. The letter reads:

"The black cobras that spit poison are the most dangerous of reptiles and can spit venom 15 feet with deadly precision and effect. At that distance, poison hurled 4 feet high on the glass of a case containing the species has clouded the glass.

"This condition prevailed here recently, when the cobras sent you and the ones here in the zoo were exhibited for the first time to visitors. The glass had to be washed so the snakes could be seen properly.

"Regarding the inquisitive gentleman who would face the cobras at a distance of 15 feet, he should equip himself with a bucket of permanganate of potash solution to duck his head in to counteract the effect of the venom. "Such an emphatic demonstration or lesson in natural history as he would stage might teach him something tangible about the ways of African cobras, if he survived."

The "spitting" cobra, like those in the zoo, are black, with red blotches on their underside, and the ones in the zoo are six feet long and about three inches in diameter. The snakes are in specially constructed cages.

Of the seven deadly cobras in the zoo, Mr. Brown says the green cobra of the Mamba species is the fastest snake in the world and strikes beyond its length in any direction with its head about five feet from the ground. The green snake is twelve feet long, has long fangs and is less than one inch in diameter. Mr. Brown added the green cobra strikes without giving a warning, and does not have to be "egged" to do it, either.—Philadelphia Record.

Better Train Handling

Passenger engineers are studying the effect of "taking up slack" in a long train by riding in the rear of such a train under a plan devised for better handling effected by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac railroad, according to Railway Review. In this way the engineers are impressed by the fact that the handling of the train, which they thought performed with due caution from their cab, was attended with serious discomfort to those in the rear cars. The plan has worked out satisfactorily, not only from the actual physical experience of the engineers' observations, but from the psychological factor which entered into the operation.

Had an Alibi

"Want to join the Legion, buddy?" asked a Legionnaire of a husky young man of about his own age. "Can't; wasn't in the service." "Why weren't you?" the veteran demanded. "My intentions were good," was the rather reluctant explanation. "I went to a recruiting office where they put me in a room and told me to take off my clothes. A doctor walked up to me, looked at me kinda hard, and then clamped me on the chest. I wasn't in the habit of letting strangers get rough with me, so I thumped his chest—and I didn't get out of the hospital until the war was over."—American Legion Weekly.

Nature Was Before Them

At Bronson, Minn., Charles Falk chose a rainy afternoon for butchering his fatted hog because the weather was not suitable for other work, and with the assistance of a neighbor the necessary preparations were made. When everything was ready the men proceeded to the pig-house to admit the stunning blow, but to their amazement found the porker dead near the door. It was found that lightning had killed the animal.

Oil Does Not Freeze

A very precious oil, suitable for aviation, since it does not congel at a very high altitude, can be extracted from crickets, says consular advice to the Department of Commerce from Algiers. Recently about 18 tons of crickets were sent to Holland from Algeria. Part of this quantity was utilized for feeding poultry, and from the remainder the oil for aviation purposes was extracted and has apparently given very satisfaction.

An Armenian pageant was being given. Several Bible scenes were enacted. One of them represented the nativity, with the scene, of course, laid in a manger. Just as the curtain was being drawn, a rather distant automobile horn out on the street was blown. An imaginative woman with a party of friends heard this and a pensive smile illuminated her face. "Now, isn't that clever of these pageant people!" she exclaimed, in a voice heard several feet away, "Having a cow moo off-stage, in order to get the proper atmosphere of the manger!"

Planes Fight Pests
Forest caterpillars which are threatening German forests are being attacked by low-flying airplanes that spray thousands of pounds of arsenated potash on tree tops, resulting in the destruction of hundreds of thousands of the destructive worms. The German department of agriculture is continuing the battle with augmented armaments. Sprays and gases are to be used from the ground while the airplanes attack from above. Similar anticaterpillar campaigns are planned throughout the country.—Family Herald.

Wolves Come Back

Wolves have been increasing for several years, especially in the northern states. When the price of wolf skins ran as high as $50 the animals were hunted with enthusiasm, while today, with the value of skins less than half what it was, the wolves are often allowed to increase. The danger from wolves is especially great in Canada, and these cross the border into the United States in large numbers, preying upon the cattle and sheep and doing great damage. The gray timber wolf is the commonest species.

Almost Frightened

John D. Rockefeller likes to tell a story of an Irishman employed by him who, in the early days of oil refining, was standing near a big tank when it exploded with a roar that could be heard for miles about. After the smoke had cleared, other workers came to gather up the fragments of the Irishman's body, only to find him sitting on a pile of debris and slowly filling his pipe. After he had filled it and ignited the tobacco, he remarked, "The dern thing, purty nigh scared me."

Preachers' Sons High in World of Finance

From time immemorial the sons of preachers have enjoyed a bad reputation, so that men have thought of them as men of old thought of Nazareth—that no good could come out of them.

Of course this charge has never been able to stand up against statistics, but what care men for statistics when they see a living example of the truth.

Nothing proves more clearly the vitality of error than the fact that though the contrary about preachers' sons has been proved repeatedly, you can never mention the downfall of a preacher's son without hearing some one say, "Well, you can expect nothing else from them, for preachers' sons are generally bad."

We have long since despaired of ever overtaking this error with respect to their morals, but we would like to call attention to their achievements as money-makers.

Mr. Babson, than whom there is no higher authority where statistics are involved, has been looking into the records of preachers' sons, and he has found that whether the preacher himself is a money-maker or not, his sons, at least, have a fine record in that line. He says that 40 per cent of the millionaires of this country and Canada are sons of preachers. Our population of 112,000,000, and there are 200 millionaires.

It follows then that it takes 5,000 preachers to produce one per cent of the millionaires, while it takes 1,863,333 of the general population to produce one per cent of the millionaires.

A little figuring will show that as wealth-producers preachers' sons produce 375 times as much as all of the other professions combined.

On one side we place the sons of the manse whose reputation is not above par, and on the other side we gather all the financiers, doctors, lawyers, professional men, with their big fees, and the great army of laboring men.

The sons of the manse are able to accumulate as much as this great mass of men.

As a certain cereal beverage has it, "There is a reason."—Presbyterian Standard.

Varnish Preserves Bones

The warning "handle with care" may no longer be so necessary in museums and laboratories where valuable bones of dinosaurs, mastodons and men's departed ancestors are preserved and studied, according to Prof. E. C. Case of the University of Michigan, who has found that by use of a varnish made from bakelite fragile material may be preserved in a practically indestructible medium. The usual means of making such specimens somewhat more durable has been to treat them with shellac. As an illustration of the success of the new method, Doctor Case says: "A human skull was selected that the writer could have crushed in his hands. After treatment it was dropped upon a table top, cautiously at first, and finally from a height of 18 inches upon its vertex without injury."

Very Glad He Accepted the Work Offered

By MILDRED GOODRIDGE

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"O H, MAN! Do you want to do some work?"

It was little Flo Duncombe, a pretty child of eight years, who shouted at a young man passing the garden where she stood with her sister, Lola.

"Work, little one?" smiled the stranger, pausing and, at one glance at the lovely face of Lola, becoming interested. "I am always glad to work. What is it?"

"Rose leaves and down!" chattered Flo, excitedly, important and eager.

"I fear my little sister has been presumptuous," spoke Miss Duncombe. "I—I needed some assistance."

"And I am glad of an offer of work," declared the young man promptly. He carried a portfolio under one arm.

"The work is less arduous than tedious and painstaking," she said, and she led the way towards an ornate summer house. As she neared its door the young man instantly understood the allusion of little Flo to rose leaves and feathers. To every projection attached particles of soft, fluff down.

Lola said: "Some one opened the windows where I had been working last night, a strong wind came up and you see the result. The rose leaves were sent me by a friend from California. I have managed to gather them up, for they were blown off the table in a heap, but the down—I fear it is not worth the labor gathering it up."

"You might try," suggested the young man. "If you would get me a pillow-slip, or a deep basket, I will see what can be done."

Miss Duncombe went to the house and brought out three baskets. She and Flo set about the same task as this "hired help." She learned that his name was Archie Blair.

It took two hours to gather up most of the scattered down. Then Lola said:

"I am greatly obliged, and the compensation—"

"I was just going to speak of that," declared Archie. "If you will allow me to sketch some of the beautiful surroundings here, with this little fairy and yourself in the picture, I will feel fully compensated."

So he was an artist, reflected Lola, and several little sketches of his pencil convinced her that his was no ordinary talent. She felt warranted in asking him to lunch, and when he went on his way little Flo made him promise to come and see them when he returned from his sketching tour.

If the young artist ceased to remember the fair maiden with whom he had spent those delightful hours, not so Lola. A newcomer in town, a Robert Wilder, came pretty regularly to see her, but Lola took little interest in him. He had bloomed forth in the village as a young man of fortune on a vacation. Mr. Duncombe had met him at the town club and took quite a fancy to him.

One evening this delectable individual met Jim Carr, a servant at the Duncombe home, in a secret way. Judging from their conversation, these two had known each other in a sinister way in the past. Further, it appeared that the vaunted young man of wealth had some hold on Jim.

"See here, Carr," he said, on the present occasion, "you know what I'm after; a rich wife. If old Duncombe has the money I think I wouldn't object to becoming his son-in-law."

"You want to be spry, then," laughed Jim.

"Why is that?"

"There's a young artist fellow who has been around for an evening or two. He met Miss Lola about a week ago, it seems, and, on his way to the city, has decided to stop in the village for a week or two. My opinion is he is in love with the girl."

"Oh, well, I'm pretty solid with the old man," boasted Wilder. "See here, I want you to do something for me, and I'll pay you well."

"All right—what is it?"

"I want you to act as my dictaphone. In other words, could you manage to overhear what conversation goes on in the house?"

"I've got some news," he advised Wilder later.

"Let's have it."

"There's a closet I managed to hide in just off the library, where I overheard a good deal. Night before last I heard Mr. Duncombe telling what a capital fellow you were."

"Good!" commented Wilder.

"Then I overheard them talking with his lawyer. From the conversation I gathered that he is worth about a hundred thousand dollars."

"Excellent—go on, Jim," directed Wilder.

"Last evening, though, a stranger called. He was inquiring about you. He is a detective from the city, looking you up for a swindling game."

"Zounds! then I'm done for," exclaimed Wilder. "I reckon I'll make tracks from town before I'm picked up," and Wilder started to move away.

"There was something more," advised Jim. "That artist fellow."

"Yes—well, what about him?" questioned Wilder irritably.

"He proposed to Miss Lola this afternoon."

"The mischief!"

"And was accepted."

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

TRANSFUSION
OF BLOOD

Performed For Former Attorney
General Hogan.

Columbus, Sept. 1.—Former Attorney General Timothy S. Hogan rallied slightly late yesterday, following a blood transfusion late in the afternoon. His condition was reported as considerably improved at 10 a. m., but the rally may be only temporary, members of the family said.

Miss Charlotte Hogan, his daughter and partner in the Hogan law firm, with her two brothers, gave the blood for the transfusion, after the blood of Mrs. Hogan, his wife, was found unsuited.

The former state attorney general has been dangerously ill for several days of pernicious anaemia.

Lamps Without Filaments

Through the invention of an electric light bulb that requires no filament, Conrad Schlickerling of Newark, N. J., claims that municipal lighting bills may be cut in half. A 500-watt lamp of the new type, he says, will burn twice as long as filament lamps and consume less than half the current now required. The inventor also has made lamps of two-watt size for use on signs, and auto lamps of two candle-power and higher, without filaments, says Popular Science Monthly. Still another of his inventions is a vacuum tube filament or grid, designed especially for alternating current rectification in radio B-battery eliminators.

Wool Grown in a Hurry

An invention which makes sheep's wool grow faster was described by Professor Barker of Leeds university at the international conference of sheep breeders at Chester.

He said a Japanese doctor had placed on the market a fluid which, when injected in the veins of a sheep, say, every two days, promotes rapid growth of wool.

"So rapid is the growth said to be," Professor Barker continued, "that two months' injection produces twelve months' growth at the ordinary rate. Thus two or three shearings each year are possible."—Tit-Bits.

KEEPING WELL

THE VALUE OF PAIN

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

PAIN is not evil, as some good but mistaken people declare. On the contrary, pain is the salvation of life. If there were no pain, we would none of us be alive. Pain is the red light on the track of life. It is a danger signal. It is the warning which the body gives of danger ahead.

The amoeba is the lowest known form of animal life. It is simply a one-celled sac of protoplasm. It gets its food by surrounding it. If good food is offered to an amoeba, it will stretch itself toward the food. If a poison is put before it, it will draw back. Too bad we haven't as much sense as the amoeba.

Headache is pain in the head. It is a warning that something is wrong somewhere. The trouble is to find the cause.

You wake up in the morning with a headache. It may be due to indigestion. Something you ate yesterday has disagreed with you. You may be suffering from constipation and be poisoned by the absorption of waste products that should have been cast out. You may have overtaxed your eyes. Whatever the cause, you know that your head hurts and you want it stopped.

So you go to the medicine closet and get out your favorite headache tablet, pill or powder. You don't know what's in it or how it works, but you know that if you take enough of it, the headache will stop.

An equally sensible way would be to have some one hit you on the head with a piece of lead pipe. That would stop the headache, but it might also stop you, permanently. So will the "headache cure," only it will take a little longer.

Any drug which is powerful enough to stop a headache without removing the cause is powerful enough to hurt you. Most of the popular "headache remedies" contain some kind of coal-tar product. They may stop the pain, but they are practically all of them dangerous heart depressants.

What would you think of a railroad engineer who got off his engine and smashed the red light with a club. You wouldn't want to ride on his train, would you?

That's what you are doing when you kill the headache with drugs. A headache is a warning to you that you are doing or have done something which your body protests against. Find out what it is and stop doing it. Don't smash the danger signal with a club.

Enviably Immunity

To the envy of the shoplifter, time steals on and cannot be arrested.

Fair Sex Not Only
Possessor of "Moods"

Margery had made a deep impression on Dick. It was a little surprising to me because Dick is generally rather critical of women. I asked him why he liked Margery so much.

"She realizes that men have moods," he replied. He would say no more, but reflecting on his remark I realized how much it revealed and how much it concealed, writes Lettice Wayne in the London Mail.

"Moods" in men or women long ago ceased to be fashionable. They exist, of course, for although we can learn to control our moods so that they do not become a nuisance to other people few of us can prevent our unaccountable depressions or elations. But among many women there still endures the belief that to experience quick changes of emotions, to awaken one day with a cheerful heart, to rise next day strangely unhappy, is a peculiarly feminine weakness. It is only the wisest of women, however, who extend such comprehension to men.

What an enormous difference it makes to the success of the relationship between a man and a woman if the man knows that the woman appreciates that he is not altogether immune from the weakness of "moodiness." It is the strength of man that he is able as a rule to hide his emotions, to maintain a reasonable level of cheerfulness and consideration for others. And, perhaps, just because he has so long accustomed himself to control his feelings, he finds it very delightful when the companionship of a woman makes it plain to him that the mask is not always effective.

It is only the unselfish woman who does not seek always to be amused who knows when a man is "moody." Responsive silence, or gentle sympathy, the tactful adaptation of her own mood to his, may touch a chord in the man's heart, and be the beginning of a long romance.

Appeals to Old and Young

Florida has two new assets to add to its bid for popularity. First, the California earthquake. Second, a pirate ship, remarks Grove Patterson in the Columbus Dispatch.

An old pirate ship was discovered twelve feet underground in Sarasota, Fla. It stirs the blood of youth, if you have any. Do childish adventures of the mind still play about pirate ships? They used to. A boy who never wanted to be a pirate probably never wanted to do anything. It is as inevitable to want to sail on a pirate ship as it is to want to be conductor on a train. If they find any more pirate ships in Florida we'll all get the fever.

Harp Loses Eminence

Tara's famous harp is disappearing and fast becoming but a memory. At the recent Feis Ceil at Dublin, the festival to which Ireland's budding musicians come annually to submit themselves to tests set by eminent adjudicators—there was only one entrant for the harp competition and only one, also, in the competition for a song with harp accompaniment. It is explained that the harp is at a disadvantage as compared with the violin and other instruments of smaller bulk, since it is not easily portable for private entertainments, and being essentially an instrument of the individual, it can never hope to find a place as an item of household equipment as does the piano. But whatever the reason, the fact remains that the harp is becoming almost as extinct in Ireland as are the snakes banished by St. Patrick.

Fertile Imagination

"I was telling myself a story I was making up," explained Frances, "and there were wolves in it—and—and I got scared!"

There seems to be nothing in Damascus they cannot turn into a sweet of some kind. The sweetstuffs of Damascus are famous; they are really candied fruits. As the climate is hot, every form of plum, apricot, peach, melon, grape, greengage and so grows. These are soaked in sugar preparations, and when served they are most luscious. Put in tins or bottles they last for years; but when freshly made they are perfectly delicious, especially the walnuts. For packing, round common wooden boxes are used, quaintly stenciled in Arabic design, and these boxes of dried fruit are sent all over the world, but of course nothing is ever so good when it has been packed as it is when it is freshly made.

SHORT STORY

Writer Uses Irish Warfare For Her Atmosphere.

A historical incident of the warfare in Ireland has been used by Miss Nell Hanson as a basis of a short story in the September McClure's. She has opened up a new field for writers with her stories of "Black and Tan Days" in Ireland.

In an "Enemy By Command," the Canadian writer has told the dilemma of a youth on whom the lot fell to murder the Resident Magistrate. And it happened that the Magistrate had befriended the very boy that I. R. A. selected to act as executioner.

The boy was unwilling to make the attempt upon the Magistrate's life, but under his oath he could not withdraw or refuse. So he prepared the ambush and with an unloaded gun appeared on the road. As he expected, he was shot down by the magistrate.

Hungarian Barber Is Heir to 100 Millions

Vienna.—Budapest newspapers state that John Szentpetery, a poor Hungarian barber, has received word from the United States that he has inherited $100,000,000, representing the estate of Major Debossy, who fought as aide de camp side by side with Kossuth in the Hungarian revolution of 1848-49.

After Kossuth escaped to Turkey on the collapse of the revolution against Austria, Debossy fled to the United States and there amassed an enormous fortune, which, upon his death, passed to his sister. The latter recently died and it was found that the poor barber is the only surviving member of the family.

He is an old man now and the news of the vast inheritance seemed to excite him less than it did the people who came to congratulate him.

SILENCE REIGNS IN THE COAL FIELDS

AS WAGE EARNERS WALK OUT— INDUSTRY ON VACATION

Greatest Fuel Strike In Years

—Is Now On In The Anthracite Region of Pennsylvania, Price of Black Diamonds May Be Raised In This Community As a Result of The Labor Troubles.

Anthracite operators Tuesday night emphasized the need to insist "that a settlement of the suspension beginning Tuesday shall include measures for avoiding future strikes."

W. W. Inglis, in a statement to this effect, which he made public in Scranton as chairman of the anthracite operators' scale committee, assailed the action of the mine workers in stopping work because no contract had been negotiated to replace the one which expired Tuesday midnight.

Operations should have gone on while negotiations were pending, as the operators had "over and over again proposed," said Inglis. "The idea that the miners cannot work unless they have a contract," he said, "is unsupported by reason or practice."

"Hundreds of thousands of workers in every class of employment," according to Inglis, "continued at work after contracts expired in the certainty that sooner or later new ones would be made."

"John L. Lewis will not permit the miners to do this," he said. "That is why we have a strike; it is not because there is no other course. It is because a strike is the only course he is willing to adopt."

A settlement now should accordingly be a settlement for all time, he said.

Hard coal operators, in informal discussion Tuesday of the conference of John Hays Hammond with President Coolidge, at Swampscott, Massachusetts on the coal situation, took issue with some of Hammond's reported proposals. They did not believe the government should take over and operate mines in time of industrial conflict, as Hammond was reported to have advised the president to urge upon congress.

"If men won't work," these operators said, "even the government could not run the mines. If the men will work, the operators can run them satisfactorily without the government."

The operators spoke personally and not officially for their group as a whole. They favored recommendations President Coolidge himself enunciated on the basis of the report of the coal commission of 1923, of which Hammond was chairman. The president wished authority to appoint a commission to deal with emergencies along the line of conciliation and voluntary arbitration to adjust controversies when collective bargaining failed, and to prevent profiteering thru the control of distribution.

At the same time a movement was reported under way Tuesday among various union groups in the region to revive the question of nationalization of coal mines. Backers of the movement, it was said, wished to continue along the line taken by the nationalization committee appointed by the United Mine Workers of America several years ago.

The entrance of the Fairmont and Baltimore Coal and Coke Co., mine at Adamston, West Virginia, was wrecked by an explosion. No one was injured. The company reopened the pit for operations a week ago under a separate wage agreement with its employees.

VIOLET GINDER WON FIRST PRIZE IN STATE CONTEST

Subject of Essay, "The Reasons I Would Give To My Younger Brothers And Sister For Letting Cigarets Alone"—That Which Destroys America's Youth, Destroys Her Future.

Miss Violet Ginder, of Darbyville, enjoys the distinction of being the first person in Pickaway county to win the first prize of ten dollars in a state essay contest.

The subject of Miss Ginder's essay was, "The Reasons I Would Give To My Younger Brothers and Sisters for Letting Cigarets Alone," and was as follows:

"By the use of cigarettes we are breaking the laws of nature, first as criminals break the laws of the government.

While one is smoking a cigaret he is doing seven things, which are as follows:

- 1—Wasting money.
- 2—Forming deleterious affects on body, mind and religious attitudes.
- 3—Endangering property.
- 4—Decreasing his social standing by indifference to common courtesy.
- 5—Acquiring an unsanitary habit.
- 6—Imposing on the personal liberty of non-users.
- 7—Shortening his life.

When we realize that in the United States over six and a quarter billion cigarettes are manufactured and sold in one month we know some one is getting wealthy as a result of our ignorance.

The money spent for cigarettes is for no real benefit but to satisfy the distress aroused by its previous use and to poison the system. Money that is spent in this manner is soon burned up in smoke, with no benefit to anyone except the manufacturers; while if it had been given to a charity cause someone would have received the real good with injury to no person's health.

The effects of cigarettes are wholly disease producing. No matter how you use them, they show upon the constitution.

Cigarets injure the heart by clogging the passages, reduces the bodily eliminations and makes normalcy impossible. This produces paralysis, insanity and other physical disorders. By contracting the passages of the kidneys, cigarettes impair the health and happiness of men. Cancer of the lip and tongue are most usually caused by excessive use of cigarettes.

Cigarets hinder the development of body and mind in younger persons and impair the efficiency of older ones.

Nicotine stupefies the brain, which results in low scholarship. An Ohio superintendent reported that 96 percent of the boys who fail in school are indulgers of tobacco. Students who smoke are not recommended by faculty members as high school teachers. Today boys learn to use cigarettes much earlier in life than in former years. Consequently more boys who have the opportunity to get an education now are not as successful as they were in the previous generation.

As the use of cigarettes increases, the desire to go to church decreases. Users of tobacco in any form care little for church, charity organizations, or the spiritual good of individuals, altho some who do not use it excessively have minor relations with religious departments.

Boys and girls of today are citizens and parents of tomorrow, and unless they guard against the use of cigarettes the coming generation will be weakened physically, mentally and morally.

A young man while waiting at a station for a train, carelessly threw away a lighted cigaret, which caught fire to a little boy's fuzzy coat. The child would have soon been fatally burned, had it not been for the heroism of a young girl who extinguished the blaze.

Statistics show that the property loss caused by lighted cigarettes amounts to many millions of dollars each year, while the total death rate from such fires reaches a high mark in the thousands.

Good manners will take one a long distance in the world. Cigarets makes boys impolite. An illustration:

A young boy, who was a heavy smoker, drove a car up in front of a house and stopped. He gave a shrill whistle. Just then the door opened, and a beautiful young girl ran down to the waiting car. Her escort, still smoking, did not open the door or assist her into the machine, but, half lying down in the car, went speeding down the street.

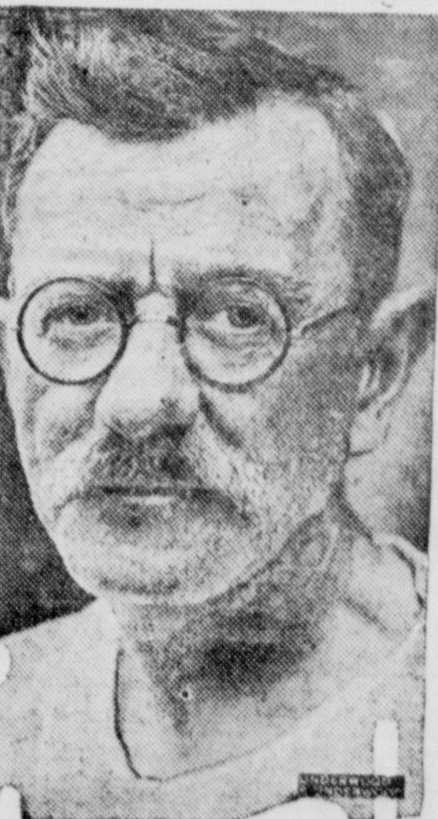

Cigarets make men thoughtless, careless, sluggish of body and indifferent to morality and courtesy. In reality, men get drunk on nicotine, which effects their conduct very much like liquor. The cigaret business is anarchistic in character, for indulgers have little regard for law. Leopold and Loeb, the most heartless murderers of all time, were both cigaret fiends. Your social life is due to your ability to be courteous. If a youth, in the prime of life, is indifferent to common courtesy in his social career, he will be so in his business career.

The nasty habit affords a way for spreading germs. The finger ends turn yellow as a result of coming into contact with the nicotine that the cigaret paper contains. If it affects the fingers in this manner, what will it do for our heart and lungs?

Christians have an unwritten law which clearly states that what offends the weak, should not be practiced by anyone who thinks he has the spirit of Christ in him. Cigaret fiends are downright selfish and obnoxious.

KEEP RURAL LIFE CLEAN

Vigorous Grange Leadership Exerts Wholesome Influence In Vital Ways.

There is much significance in the action of the executive committee of the New York Grange in the steps just taken relative to one phase of the big State fair at Syracuse. Learning that application had been made to the fair commission to allow a prize fight in the new coliseum on the grounds, the executive committee of the State Grange immediately met and passed a formal resolution, asking the fair commission to deny the use of the buildings and grounds for any such purpose, as being wholly contrary to the principles for which the state fair is designed, and likewise in violation of the highest ideals of the rural people of the Empire State.

This action is in line with the general policy of the Grange in behalf of clean entertainment, and such policy it exemplifies in the administration of its own halls throughout the United States. All Grange programs and entertainment features are maintained on the highest possible moral plane and when dances and social functions are conducted in Grange halls they are very closely supervised; when made public at all, tickets of admission are frequently issued so that no objectionable parties can secure admission. By this policy the environment which the Grange seeks to put around its young people in the country is kept at the maximum of wholesomeness, and very great service to the rural welfare is being constantly rendered by the Grange in this respect.

Striving toward similar ideals, Granges, as a rule, far from their fairs all events, games of chance and similar projects calculated to mislead or defraud patrons of such attractions. In this respect the Grange has set a good example, even to churches, and is in line with the recognized Grange policy relative to agricultural and county fairs, in which the organization demands a high standard of attractions, protesting everything of objectionable and catch-penny kind.

The Trusting Sex

"Well, dear," said Mrs. Jones, as her husband one evening dragged himself wearily up the porch steps and sat down with a sigh in his favorite rocker, "how did things go at the office today?" Mr. Jones sighed again, and fanned himself with his straw hat as he replied, absent-mindedly, "They didn't go well. They didn't go well. They didn't go well at all. I had a ninety-three and I should have had a ninety-two."

Mrs. Jones smiled. "Ninety-two orders in one day," she cooed, "I wouldn't call that bad for a beginner!"

Another Solemn Thought

Lost time is never found again.

HAIR CUT AND DYE FOOLED SHERIFF

Unwittingly Talked With Man He Hunted.

New York.—The police circular gave a minute description of the fugitive and called particular attention to his most prominent characteristic, a head of bushy iron gray hair. "He is cultured, with agreeable manners," said the circular, "and being fastidious he usually makes his home in first-class hotels." The fugitive was a notorious forger who had been passing bad checks in the South.

"We were hot on the fellow's trail," said a deputy sheriff from a southern state, "when he suddenly dropped out of sight as if the earth had swallowed him. Though I had never seen him, I had a recent photograph of him and I was sure I would recognize him. When word came he was in a certain city I repaired there without delay and spent my time hanging about the lobbies of the best hotels. Every time I saw a man with a good head of hair I would scrutinize him closely. My quarry, however, failed to put in an appearance, and I began to fear my quest would end in failure when word reached me that my man had been apprehended in a nearby city."

Didn't Recognize Him.

"When I arrived there I went immediately to police headquarters. When I saw him I gasped. Instead of having a bushy head of iron gray hair he had smooth brown hair which was closely cropped and parted in the middle. I consulted the circular and the photograph and told myself I would not have recognized him from either."

"Are you sure you've got the right man?" I asked.

"Sure, he's the right man," they said. "We've made his acquaintance before. He had his hair cut, dyed it, and smoothed it down with grease."

"He told me afterward he had stood beside me at a hotel desk while I was asking the clerk if they had a guest with a big crop of bushy iron gray hair."

The case is not unusual. The police have long known that fugitives resort to all manner of disguises to throw them off the track. A good many thieves bear ineffaceable scars of battle on chin, cheek and throat. They realize that such marks may prove to be their undoing and try to hide them. A mustache will sometimes hide a scarred lip and a beard will conceal a tell-tale throat.

Police circulars are frequently posted in small-town railroad stations and buildings. The fugitive often thus comes face to face with his own likeness. It is common for him to dye his hair, and in some cases to stain his face so that he becomes dark instead of fair. Bald-headed criminals frequently wear toupees or wigs.

Dress for Parts.

Professional criminals, like actors, dress for the parts they play. The bogus physician affects the airs of a member of the medical fraternity; the confidence man endeavors to look like a prosperous broker or banker; the card-sharp assumes the manners of a well-dressed man of leisure. None of them want to look like crooks, but nevertheless the majority, especially burglars and hold-up men, look their role. Few of them spend their gains on a wardrobe. The majority of them, according to the police, either gamble or spend their money entertaining women. A large number of the thieves and hold-up men who fall into the police net are rough and poorly clad. If they have been following their calling any length of time it is stamped on their faces. They are hard of countenance and cold of eye.

Detectives traditionally disguise themselves if they believe it will help them in their work. They are frequently assigned to cover weddings and receptions where they mingle with the guests. Then they wear the same conventional garments that other guests wear. If they are assigned to visit rough places they clothe themselves in coarse clothes and go unshaven for days. When two such detectives appear at a police station they resemble vagabonds so closely that were it not for the credentials they carry their acquaintances would scarcely recognize them.

Famous Cemetery of Pioneer West Passes

Los Angeles, Cal.—Latest of the famous landmarks of the Southwest to be moved down by the sickle of progress in the old Cavalry cemetery here which played a part in the early history of the region. Not since 1896 has a funeral cortege passed through the cemetery's gates.

An ordinance passed recently requires the removal of all bodies buried there.

Known among the old-timers as the Buena Vista cemetery, the burial ground occupies more than ten acres and entombs some of the most distinguished figures in the Spanish colonial history of southern California.

Negligence in the care of the graves has resulted in the gradual advance of ruin. Tombstones that once stood in stately dignity have crumbled, while weeds have grown knee deep over the plots.

Some Cherry Tree

Yakima, Wash.—William G. Martin, a rancher near Wapato, Wash., has one Royal Ann cherry tree which this year yielded a crop of 1,000 pounds of fruit. Fifty other trees in his orchard yielded an average of 700 pounds.

Properly Fitted Gloves Sure to Give Service

The saleswoman at the glove counter no longer says, "What size, please?" nowadays; instead she carefully measures your hand and then produces the proper-sized glove for it. Nevertheless, the thoughtful shopper likes to know what the process is which enables her to do so—every woman wants to know what size glove she wears!

Your kid gloves come in quarter sizes from 5½ to 8½, and you get them with fingers long, or short, or medium. You should get your fabric glove about a half size larger than you do the kid ones, since the cloth gloves have practically no "stretch" to them. Misses' gloves come in the same sizes as women's gloves do. Men's range from 6½ to 10. And children's gloves can be had from 0000 to 7.

Don't make the mistake of insisting upon the size you "have been wearing," when the saleswoman suggests another. Particularly if your old glove is torn or split, there is evidence that the new one should be selected according to the size of the hand—not according to the size of the worn-out glove.

It seems that women have a tendency to buy too small gloves. And it is for this reason that the "French" system of glove sizes, rather than the "American" system that has been described, is sometimes used; for this "French" system, also called the "blind" system, because the chances are that the customer will not understand it, eliminates the probability that the customer will insist on buying a size too small for her.

However, if you do find the "American" system of glove sizes in use, remember these points when you are tempted to insist on having your "regular size." In the first place, gloves differ so greatly in elasticity that a size right for you in one kind of material may be quite wrong in another.

Again, different makes of gloves run differently in sizes. Then, it's not impossible for your hand to grow, you know! Just because you once wore a size 6½ glove is no reason that you always should. And, finally, don't think you can settle the matter of glove sizes merely by holding the back of the glove up to the back of your hand; for the glove must not only fit the width of your hand, but its bulk also.

Remember that a too small glove does not minimize the size of the hand. It simply splits out rapidly, and so is a costly purchase.

Capes Are Featured in Early Autumn Fashions

Every fashion report emphasizes the importance of capes and, in the advance collections shown for early fall, wraps of this type are conspicuously featured.

Almost overnight they have dawned upon fashion's horizon and even in the modes of the hour the cape in its varied and interesting interpretations has a place of exceptional prominence. The transparent wrap, which may be a coat but quite as often is a cape, is one of the essentials of a wardrobe and whether it forms part of an ensemble or has been designed to accompany a frock of different material it is to be found in practically every notable collection of new models.

The triple cape of black satin launched recently has been a huge success and has inspired other models rather similar in type. One of these is fashioned of heavy brown crepe de chine, each cape laid in fine plaits which are held in at the bottom with a band of the material. The revers are faced with crepe de chine in a tone of pale beige.

A model of this type is adapted to many materials. It would be most effective in black or navy georgette or in lighter chiffons to match the frock underneath. And if one desired to carry out the color scheme the cape might be of deep violet crepe with the dress in a shade several tones lighter.

The Vogue of Red

A smart costume which reflects the popularity of red consists of a jumper of red flat crepe worn with a plaited skirt of red and white printed silk and topped by a knee-length coat of red kasha lined with the same silk. A hat or red bangkok and a red and white scarf complete an effective ensemble.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

The Evidences of Regeneration

By a unanimous vote of the plantation hands one Henry Johnson was held to be the wickedest man on the place. He shot craps, he had served a year on the chain-gang for swining a wicked razor, and, generally, lived a wild, free, reckless life. Accordingly, there was rejoicing at Zion church when word spread that Henry at last had seen the light and had been converted.

The revival meeting whereat he had been redeemed culminated one Sunday in a grand baptizing on Goose creek. Henry had an eight-mile tramp to reach the appointed spot. When he started from his cabin after breakfast he stowed a dozen cold biscuits in the front of shirt, meaning to refresh himself on the way. But in his newborn exaltation he actually forgot to eat.

A great host was gathered on the creek bank, and, at his appearance, loud hallelujahs arose in a fervent chorus. The preacher laid hands on Henry and, aided by two of the deacons, escorted him to the middle of the stream where the water was waist-deep. As the clergyman, pronouncing the words of the ritual, immersed Henry deeply in the water the lowermost button of Henry's shirt slipped from its buttonhole and rapidly, one by one, four huge cold biscuits arose to the surface and went bobbing down the current.

From the shore a devout sister raised a sudden cry:

"Oh, Lordy, parson, dip 'im ag'in—dip 'im ag'in, in de Lord's name! His sins is comin' up in lumps!"

Seed Treatment to Prevent Smut

Powdered Copper Carbonate Can Be Applied by the Farmer at Any Time.

A method of seed treatment to prevent smut or stinking smut in wheat where the fungicide is applied dry has been found which not only permits the treating of the seed dry, but at the same time does not destroy any of the viability of seed. It also prevents infection of the seed in the soil. This method enables the farmer to treat his seed wheat during slack time and have it ready when needed. The fungicide used is powdered copper carbonate.

Fairly Pure Material.

Copper carbonate used should be fairly pure containing more than 50 per cent copper. It is a fine dry powder, light green in color, never blue unless impure. It is not soluble in water so does not get sticky when on grain in storage. It should be very fine, 99 per cent should pass through a 200-mesh screen.

This powdered copper carbonate is dusted on the wheat seed. Being a very fine dust it adheres to the seed, giving a thin coating of the fungicide that prevents infection from the smut or other fungus. Treatment at the rate of two ounces of good copper carbonate to the bushel of clean seed gives immunity. A heaping tablespoon of copper carbonate weighs approximately one ounce. There are machines available on the market or home-made contrivances can be used.

Treat Seed in Open.

When treating seed with this method it should be done in the open, or the operator should wear a dust mask or wet sponge over his mouth and nose, as the copper carbonate dust will cause nausea if it gets into the throat.

Seed treated with copper carbonate can be stored after treating. The dust does not absorb water, nor does it injure the seed. Seed so treated is not swelled and no allowance needs to be made at drilling time for swelling. In fact, due to increased viability caused by this treatment, less seed than normal should be used.—Waldo Kidder, Extension Agronomist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Chicken Mites Numerous During the Hot Season

The summer time brings with it our greatest trouble with chicken mites. If they once get a start it is usually a long fight to get the best of them. They can be prevented in getting a start, however, with regular spraying of the poultry house once a week. Any good contact sprays such as the various sheep dips, crude oil, a mixture of carbolic acid and kerosene, or any of the coal tar products are good. The solution you buy in the can is usually designated as a stock solution. In making up a spray mixture for mites 3 per cent or three parts of this stock solution is used to 97 per cent or 97 parts of water. This strength is sufficient to keep down mites. If the mites once get a start it may be necessary to use as strong as 10 per cent solution.

Male and Female Rouen Ducks Are Much Unlike

The Rouen duck is the most beautiful of all ducks, and the dark Muscovy next handsomest. The latter are of blue body, green back, white tail, white band about the neck, deep red face and yellow legs, and both sexes are alike. But the Rouen, male and female, are distinctly unlike. The duck is a bright red and brown, feathers pencilled evenly with black, red bill, and two transverse stripes of white and black on the wings. The drake has a green head and bill, a white neck band, brown breast, blue underbody, green back, white tail, bars of white, black and brown on under tip of wings, with reddish yellow feet.

Best Feed for Hogs

Pigs turned on soy beans when the pods are filled receive sufficient protein without the addition of a supplement. Permanent pasture is not in the same class with rape, rye or soy beans, but is much better than no pasture. Lespedeza is one of the clovers and is a splendid pasture while it lasts. It is possible to have pasture every month in the year and this system is necessary for the most economical pork production.

Cost of Screening Barn

The cost of screening the barn is more than paid for by the increased production. When the cows are free from flies they can devote their energy to production. If screening cannot be done, spraying with some cheap but effective fly repellent should precede the milking process, whenever possible. Care should be taken, however, not to get any of the spray into the milk, because of the disagreeable odor and taste it will impart.

Care and Feed for Calf

An important thing is to keep the buckets or other utensils from which the calf is fed scrupulously clean at all times. The calf bucket should be washed daily. If it is allowed to get sour, scours are almost sure to follow. After weaning, grain feeding should be continued. Three or four pounds of a good grain mixture will keep it in fine condition until it is a year old and a little more grain should be fed the second year.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Might Be, You Know

A certain sour spinster always became annoyed when asked a question the answer to which she considered obvious. Thus on the last night of April last she asked the girl at the hotel desk to call her early the next morning by ringing her telephone bell in her bedroom.

"To catch a train?" asked the girl, pleasantly.

"For what other reason does one wish to be called early?"

"Sometimes one is to be queen of the May," suggested the girl, still pleasantly.

Italy's Heroes

One of the impressive features of the procession in honor of Victor Emmanuel's twenty-fifth anniversary as king of Italy, was the squad of 50 "Garibaldini" who more than half a century ago fought their way with "the liberator" from Marsala to Capua. Not only in parades, but often on ordinary days one may see these picturesque old men, with their red shirts and their long white beards and frequently in white trousers, hobbling along the streets on canes, sometimes mumbling to themselves and eyeing curiously this noisy, white, modern Rome, so different from the sleepy reddish-brown city for which they offered their lives. Is the reverence which they inspire the product of a romantic legend? Perhaps. But they have a sound title to honor. They never attacked a foe weaker in arms and numbers than themselves. They never persecuted the weak. They never humiliated or mistreated a conquered foe. They never confiscated the property of the poor. Not all the younger Italians who have used violence for patriotic ends have as good a record as theirs.

The political big stick is being applied to senators who refuse to accept the world court prescription as it is handed to them by the international physicians.

GYM DANCE

"The best ever," was the verdict of all guests at the big Carnival dance at the C. A. C. Gym Tuesday night. If you missed the Carnival dance, you missed a mighty good time. The committee is to be congratulated on showing its patrons such an enjoyable evening.

The fun began at half past ten o'clock with the distributing of fancy paper hats, horns, serpentine and confetti and lasted two hours, everybody entering into the spirit of the carnival with a zest. The music, furnished by The Rhythmats and directed by Paul H. Kleinke, supplied the largest part of the evening's enjoyment with their perfect time and rhythm. The Rhythmats is one of the best dance orchestras that has ever played in the C. A. C. gym and the management has secured them for a return engagement September 26. If you were not at the dance Tuesday night you will have another opportunity of hearing this excellent orchestra on the night of September 26.

Big Crowds Attended Kellstadt and Plum Brothers
Show on North Court.

A show put on by the Kellstadt and Plum Brothers Tuesday in the former's back yard on North Court street, before a large and enthusiastic audience of one hundred children and adults, was quite a big success.

The principal performers included: Charles Plum, master of ceremonies; John and Billy Kellstadt and their rope jumping dog, Alexander the Great. Ned and Dick Plum, real Indian warriors; Paul Wallace and Frederick Colville and their educated ponies, Prince and Ginger; Robert Rooney with his wire walking South American parrot; Junior Dunlap and his Mountain Shepherd dog, Emperor Joseph; Happy Hilliard, John Mason and Morris Leist, the clowniest of clowns; to say nothing of Starkey's white donkey which somehow would separate itself and riders from the parade only to join the procession later, appearing unexpectedly from an alley or side street.

All in all, a real circus was staged; menagerie, acrobatic stunts, funny clowns, pink lemonade and everything.

AMUSEMENTS

A motion picture story of a decidedly different sort is promised for the Metropolitan theater when King Vidor's "Wife of the Centaur" opens today for an engagement of two days.

Adapted from the sensational novel by Cyril Hume, the picture tells, rather than the typical love story, the story of a man with many loves; a man who hates himself for his infidelity, but who cannot resist temptation.

That every man, like the centaur of mythology, is "half man and half beast" is the theory on which Hume based his story. The "centaur" played by John Gilbert, is a romantic, picturesque figure, in whom conflicting emotions are always struggling. He holds a high idealistic love for one woman, but cannot resist the attraction of others.

Vidor has filmed the story, it is reported with remarkable fidelity to the book, and has given it a screen translation with many striking scenes and contrasts.

Eleanor Boardman and Aileen Pringle are cast in the leading feminine roles, as the two women with whom the "centaur" is in love.

The supporting cast, which is an unusually large one, contains the names of such well known players as William Haines, Betty Francisco, Philo McCullough, Jacquelin Gadsdon, Kate Price, Kate Lester, Lincoln Stedman, William Orlamond and others.

"Wife of the Centaur" was adapted to the screen by Douglas Doty. It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offering.

Sheriff Hears of Raise in Pay 20 Years Late

Edmonton, Alberta. — Notification that he had been granted a substantial advance in salary failed to arouse Sheriff Peter Gunn of Edmonton to any unusual pitch of enthusiasm. Not that he did not appreciate the liberality of his employer, but rather to the fact that he will never reap the fruit of the "increase."

The notice of his salary raise came to the sheriff in a letter from the north country written nearly thirty years ago. By some trick of fate the letter had gone astray.

It was dated January 6, 1896, and was written by Ewen MacDonald, at that time manager of the Peace river district for the Hudson's Bay company. Gunn, then comparatively young, was employed at the company's post at Lesser Slave lake.

The hardy Scotchman, MacDonald, long since dead, informs Mr. Gunn in the letter that his "services have been highly satisfactory" and that, as a result, he has been awarded a "magnificent" increase in English pounds sterling.

Cigarettes destroy some features in boys that distinguish them from beasts; a beast has no regard for the comfort of his kinsmen, neither has the smoker.

A tobacco user, when interviewed concerning his obnoxious habit, usually answers, "It doesn't harm me. As long as I feel like using it, no one can stop me. A person certainly has some privileges of his own in a free country." This indulger is not considering the rights of non-users and the detriment he is doing them. Isn't it disgusting, harmful, and dangerous to them?

If a person indulges in a certain activity, harms no one but himself it is called a vice, but when it begins to injure others, it is called a crime; cigarette using is a crime.

The chief reason for the abolishment of liquor was the trespassing on the personal liberty of others. Isn't tobacco just as great a public nuisance as liquor?

It is an imposition upon nonusers, as they are compelled to breathe the cigarette, cigar and pipe fumes.

A man drives a nail into his coffin every time he smokes a cigarette. Smokers die on an average from seven to eight years sooner than non-smokers. Indulgers of tobacco are committing suicide on the installment plan. Altho it does not kill instantly, it causes early death, if used for a number of years. Warren G. Harding and Charles P. Steinmetz were heavy smokers. As you remember when these two middleaged men became sick, they had no extra heart action upon which to rely. Woodrow Wilson, a non-smoker, was seized by an ailment that brought him almost to the point of death, but in his hour of need he had a very good heart.

Tobacco smoke contains 18 or 19 poisons injurious to health, but not one beneficial element.

That which destroys America's youth, destroys her future. America's future lies in the young generation grasping the non-users' viewpoint.

All real Christians are interested in the good of all mankind, and every patriot is interested in the public good; therefore, you must stand opposed to cigarettes.

Complete Disarmament Hard to Bring About

There is nothing new under the sun; and even anti-weapon laws have been tried before—in 1382, for instance. A greedy and witless king of France, Charles VI, attempted to reimpose on the people of Paris what would now be called a sales tax. The people of Paris arose in their might—armed, as it happened, with mallets. The insurrection was quickly put down by the disciplined forces; but, to prevent further troubles of the kind, a rigorous disarmament law was passed and very strictly enforced. Paris was regarded as the pivot of the kingdom; it must not be split by internal fighting; and obviously—to the feeble mind of Charles VI—fighting would be absolutely prevented by the removal of the inhabitants' weapons.

Time passed, about 30 years. A generation of Parisians arose which knew no weapons. Then under circumstances it is not necessary to detail, a certain duke of Burgundy wished to have command of the city. It was politically impossible for him to take it by force of arms; but it was possible, as it would be nowadays, for him to engineer the election of a friend of his to the captaincy of the city. Had all the inhabitants been armed, this move would have been without effect; a captain can only command; and to order the whole body of the citizenry to fight against its own interests would be useless.

But, under the circumstances, the count de St. Pol's course was clear. One class of citizens had of necessity been exempted from the disarmament process—the butchers. The butchers had knives, axes and bludgeons galore—just as after modern disarmament plumbors would still have lots of lead pipe, and miners plenty of dynamite. And one class of citizens can usually be induced to betray the other classes for its own benefit.

So the duke of Burgundy controlled Paris, much against the desire of the Parisians at large, by means of a Parisian militia.

The powerful, but unarmed, university; and the indignant, but weaponless, population, protested violently. But it has not been recorded anywhere that their protests ever did them any good.—F. R. Buckley in Adventure Magazine.

COBRA SPITS DEATH FROM FIFTEEN FEET

Jungle Has Many Other Deadly Denizens.

To end a controversy over the death-dealing effect of a "spitting" cobra at a distance of 15 feet, C. Emerson Brown, superintendent of the Zoological gardens, is in possession of additional expert advice that upholds his contention.

"Publicity given the purchase of the deadly collection of snakes which were brought here from New York has aroused doubt in the minds of a number of persons who have informed me in writing and by telephone that they do not believe the snakes are so deadly," said Mr. Brown.

"One man wrote me he would not be afraid to face the pair of 'spitting' cobras at a distance of 15 feet, without any barriers between them. Of course, I do not believe he would, but he won't be given a chance, anyhow," added Mr. Brown.

Mr. Brown then offered a letter from Raymond Dittmars, curator of reptiles at the Bronx zoo, in New York, who is reputed to be the greatest authority on reptiles in this country. The letter reads:

"The black cobras that spit poison are the most dangerous of reptiles and can spit venom 15 feet with deadly precision and effect. At that distance, poison hurled 4 feet high on the glass of a case containing the species has clouded the glass.

"This condition prevailed here recently, when the cobras sent you and the ones here in the zoo were exhibited for the first time to visitors. The glass had to be washed so the snakes could be seen properly.

"Regarding the inquisitive gentleman who would face the cobras at a distance of 15 feet, he should equip himself with a bucket of permanganate of potash solution to duck his head in to counteract the effect of the venom.

"Such an emphatic demonstration or lesson in natural history as he would stage might teach him something tangible about the ways of African cobras, if he survived."

The "spitting" cobra, like those in the zoo, are black, with red blotches on their underside, and the ones in the zoo are six feet long and about three inches in diameter. The snakes are in specially constructed cages.

Of the seven deadly cobras in the zoo, Mr. Brown says the green cobra of the Mamba species is the fastest snake in the world and strikes beyond its length in any direction with its head about five feet from the ground. The green snake is twelve feet long, has long fangs and is less than one inch in diameter. Mr. Brown added the green cobra strikes without giving a warning, and does not have to be "egged" to do it, either.—Philadelphia Record.

Better Train Handling

Passenger engineers are studying the effect of "taking up slack" in a long train by riding in the rear of such a train under a plan devised for better handling effected by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac railroad, according to Railway Review. In this way the engineers are impressed by the fact that the handling of the train, which they thought performed with due caution from their cab, was attended with serious discomfort to those in the rear cars. The plan has worked out satisfactorily, not only from the actual physical experience of the engineers' observations, but from the psychological factor which entered into the operation.

Had an Alibi

"Want to join the Legion, buddy?" asked a Legionnaire of a husky young man of about his own age.

"Can't; wasn't in the service."

"Why weren't you?" the veteran demanded.

"My intentions were good," was the rather reluctant explanation. "I went to a recruiting office where they put me in a room and told me to take off my clothes. A doctor walked up to me, looked at me kinda hard, an' then thumped me on the chest. I wasn't in the habit of letting strangers get rough with me, so I thumped his chest—an' I didn't get out of the hospital until the war was over."—American Legion Weekly.

Nature Was Before Them

At Bronson, Minn., Charles Falk chose a rainy afternoon for butchering his fatted hog because the weather was not suitable for other work, and with the assistance of a neighbor the necessary preparations were made. When everything was ready the men proceeded to the pig-house to administer the stunning blow, but to their amazement found the porker dead near the door. It was found that lightning had killed the animal.

Oil Does Not Freeze

A very precious oil, suitable for aviation, since it does not congeal even at a very high altitude, can be extracted from crickets, says consular advice to the Department of Commerce from Algiers.

Recently about 18 tons of crickets were sent to Holland from Algeria. Part of this quantity was utilized for feeding poultry, and from the remainder the oil for aviation purposes was extracted and has apparently given very satisfaction.

Named by Cortez

The name "California" was applied by Cortez to the bay and the country, which he supposed to be an island. The name is that of an island in an old Spanish romance, where a great abundance of precious stones was found. Vincent Blasco Ibanez in his novel "Queen Calafia" gives an interesting account of early California.

Tower of London Schools

Two little schools are conducted in the Tower of London. One is for pupils from five to eight years old, and the other is for older children. The pupils are the children of soldiers garrisoned at the Tower, and of the warders.

Wolves Come Back

Wolves have been increasing for several years, especially in the northern states. When the price of wolf skins ran as high as $30 the animals were hunted with enthusiasm, while today, with the value of skins less than half what it was, the wolves are often allowed to increase. The danger from wolves is especially great in Canada, and these cross the border into the United States in large numbers, preying upon the cattle and sheep and doing great damage. The gray timber wolf is the commonest species.

Almost Frightened

John D. Rockefeller likes to tell a story of an Irishman employed by him who, in the early days of oil refining, was standing near a big tank when it exploded with a roar that could be heard for miles about. After the smoke had cleared, other workers came to gather up the fragments of the Irishman's body, only to find him sitting on a pile of debris and slowly filling his pipe. After he had filled it and ignited the tobacco, he remarked, "The dern thing, purty high scared me."

Preachers' Sons High in World of Finance

From time immemorial the sons of preachers have enjoyed a bad reputation, so that men have thought of them as men of old thought of Nazareth—that no good could come out of them.

Of course this charge has never been able to stand up against statistics, but what care men for statistics when they see a living example of the truth.

Nothing proves more clearly the vitality of error than the fact that though the contrary about preachers' sons has been proved repeatedly, you can never mention the downfall of a preacher's son without hearing some one say, "Well, you can expect nothing else from them, for preachers' sons are generally bad."

We have long since despaired of ever overtaking this error with respect to their morals, but we would like to call attention to their achievements as money-makers.

Mr. Babson, than whom there is no higher authority where statistics are involved, has been looking into the records of preachers' sons, and he has found that whether the preacher himself is a money-maker or not, his sons, at least, have a fine record in that line. He says that 40 per cent of the millionaires of this country and Canada are sons of preachers. Our population of 112,000,000, and there are 200 millionaires.

It follows then that it takes 5,000 preachers to produce one per cent of the millionaires, while it takes 1,833,333 of the general population to produce one per cent of the millionaires.

A little figuring will show that as wealth-producers preachers' sons produce 375 times as much as all of the other professions combined.

On one side we place the sons of the manse whose reputation is not above par, and on the other side we gather all the financiers, doctors, lawyers, professional men, with their big fees, and the great army of laboring men.

The sons of the manse are able to accumulate as much as this great mass of men.

As a certain cereal beverage has it, "There is a reason."—Presbyterian Standard.

Varnish Preserves Bones

The warning "handle with care" may no longer be so necessary in museums and laboratories where valuable bones of dinosaurs, mastodons and men's departed ancestors are preserved and studied, according to Prof. E. C. Case of the University of Michigan, who has found that by use of a varnish made from bakelite fragile material may be preserved in a practically indestructible medium. The usual means of making such specimens somewhat more durable has been to treat them with shellac. As an illustration of the success of the new method, Doctor Case says: "A human skull was selected that the writer could have crushed in his hands. After treatment it was dropped upon a table top, cautiously at first, and finally from a height of 18 inches upon its vertex without injury."

Local Color

An Armenian pageant was being given. Several Bible scenes were enacted. One of them represented the nativity, with the scene, of course, laid in a manger.

Just as the curtain was being drawn, a rather distant automobile horn out on the street was blown. An imaginative woman with a party of friends heard this and a pleased smile illuminated her face. "Now, isn't that clever of these pageant people!" she exclaimed, in a voice heard several feet away, "Having a cow moo off-stage, in order to get the proper atmosphere of the manger!"

Planes Fight Pests

Forest caterpillars which are threatening German forests are being attacked by low-flying airplanes that spray thousands of pounds of arsenated potato on tree tops, resulting in the destruction of hundreds of thousands of the destructive worms. The German department of agriculture is continuing the battle with augmented armaments. Sprays and gases are to be used from the ground while the airplanes attack from above. Similar anticaterpillar campaigns are planned throughout the country.—Family Herald.

Wolves Come Back

Wolves have been increasing for several years, especially in the northern states. When the price of wolf skins ran as high as $30 the animals were hunted with enthusiasm, while today, with the value of skins less than half what it was, the wolves are often allowed to increase. The danger from wolves is especially great in Canada, and these cross the border into the United States in large numbers, preying upon the cattle and sheep and doing great damage. The gray timber wolf is the commonest species.

Beside her bed when she arose in the morning the beautiful wife of a wealthy merchant of Lugano, Switzerland, found her jewels done up in a neat package and the following letter written in Italian: "Signorina—Last night I visited your flat when you were asleep. As I had not the honor of a personal invitation, I entered by the open window—frankly in order to rob you. You will notice that I collected your jewels and some other valuables, which I am greatly ashamed to say I intended taking with me. I saw you sleeping peacefully and fell in love with you. I sat by your bedside for ten minutes 'devouring' your beauty, and became ashamed of myself. Therefore I restore you your jewels. Your humble admirer."

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Very Glad He Accepted the Work Offered

By MILDRED GOODRIDGE
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"O H, MAN! Do you want to do some work?"

It was little Flo Duncombe, a pretty child of eight years, who shouted at a young man passing the garden where she stood with her sister, Iola.

"Work, little one?" smiled the stranger, pausing and, at one glance at the lovely face of Iola, becoming interested. "I am always glad to work. What is it?"

"Rose leaves and down!" chattered Flo, excitedly, important and eager.

"I fear my little sister has been presumptuous," spoke Miss Duncombe. "I—I needed some assistance."

"And I am glad of an offer of work," declared the young man promptly. He carried a portfolio under one arm.

"The work is less arduous than tedious and painstaking," she said, and she led the way towards an ornate summer house. As she neared its door the young man instantly understood the allusion of little Flo to rose leaves and feathers. To every projection attached particles of soft, flimy down.

Iola said: "Some one opened the windows where I had been working last night, a strong wind came up and you see the result. The rose leaves were sent me by a friend from California. I have managed to gather them up, for they were blown off the table in a heap, but the down—I fear it is not worth the labor gathering it up."

"You might try," suggested the young man. "If you would get me a pillow-slip, or a deep basket, I will see what can be done."

Miss Duncombe went to the house and brought out three baskets. She and Flo set about the same task as this "hired help." She learned that his name was Archie Blair.

It took two hours to gather up most of the scattered down. Then Iola said:

"I am greatly obliged, and the compensation—"

"I was just going to speak of that," declared Archie. "If you will allow me to sketch some of the beautiful surroundings here, with this little fairy and yourself in the picture, I will feel fully compensated."

So he was an artist, reflected Iola, and several little sketches of his pencil convinced her that his was no ordinary talent. She felt warranted in asking him to lunch, and when he went on his way little Flo made him promise to come and see them when he returned from his sketching tour.

If the young artist ceased to remember the fair maiden with whom he had spent those delightful hours, not so Iola. A newcomer in town, a Robert Wilder, came pretty regularly to see her, but Iola took little interest in him. He had bloomed forth in the village as a young man of fortune on a vacation. Mr. Duncombe had met him at the town club and took quite a fancy to him.

One evening this delectable individual met Jim Carr, a servant at the Duncombe home, in a secret way. Judging from their conversation, these two had known each other in a sinister way in the past. Further, it appeared that the vaunted young man of wealth had some hold on Jim.

"See here, Carr," he said, on the present occasion, "you know what I'm after: a rich wife. If old Duncombe has the money I think I wouldn't object to becoming his son-in-law."

"You want to be spry, then," laughed Jim.

"Why is that?"

"There's a young artist fellow who has been around for an evening or two. He met Miss Iola about a week ago, it seems, and, on his way to the city, has decided to stop in the village for a week or two. My opinion is he is in love with the girl."

"Oh, well, I'm pretty solid with the old man," boasted Wilder. "See here, I want you to do something for me, and I'll pay you well."

"All right—what is it?"

"I want you to act as my dictaphone. In other words, could you manage to overhear what conversation goes on in the house?"

"I've got some news," he advised Wilder later.

"Let's have it."

"There's a closet I managed to hide in just off the library, where I overheard a good deal. Night before last I heard Mr. Duncombe telling what a capital fellow you were."

"Good!" commented Wilder.

"Then I overheard them talking with his lawyer. From the conversation I gathered that he is worth about a hundred thousand dollars."

"Excellent—go on, Jim," directed Wilder.

"Last evening, though, a stranger called. He was inquiring about you. He is a detective from the city, looking you up for a swindling game."

"Zounds! then I'm done for," exclaimed Wilder. "I reckon I'll make tracks from town before I'm picked up," and Wilder started to move away.

"There was something more," advised Jim. "That artist fellow."

"Yes—well, what about him?" questioned Wilder irritably.

"He proposed to Miss Iola this afternoon."

"The mischief!"

"And was accepted."

TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD

Performed For Former Attorney General Hogan.

Columbus, Sept. 1.—Former Attorney General Timothy S. Hogan rallied slightly late yesterday, following a blood transfusion late in the afternoon. His condition was reported as considerably improved at 10 a. m., but the rally may be only temporary, members of the family said.

Miss Charlotte Hogan, his daughter and partner in the Hogan law firm, with her two brothers, gave the blood for the transfusion, after the blood of Mrs. Hogan, his wife, was found unsuited.

The former state attorney general has been dangerously ill for several days of pernicious anaemia.

Lamps Without Filaments

Through the invention of an electric light bulb that requires no filament, Conrad Schicklerling of Newark, N. J., claims that municipal lighting bills may be cut in half. A 500-watt lamp of the new type, he says, will burn twice as long as filament lamps and consume less than half the current now required. The inventor also has made lamps of two-watt size for use on signs, and auto lamps of two candle-power and higher, without filaments, says Popular Science Monthly. Still another of his inventions is a vacuum tube filament or grid, designed especially for alternating current rectification in radio B-battery eliminators.

Wool Grown in a Hurry

An invention which makes sheep's wool grow faster was described by Professor Barker of Leeds university at the international conference of sheep breeders at Chester.

He said a Japanese doctor had placed on the market a fluid which, when injected in the veins of a sheep, say, every two days, promotes rapid growth of wool.

"So rapid is the growth said to be," Professor Barker continued, "that two months' injection produces twelve months' growth at the ordinary rate. Thus two or three shearings each year are possible."—Tit-Bits.

KEEPING WELL

THE VALUE OF PAIN

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

PAIN is not evil, as some good but mistaken people declare. On the contrary, pain is the salvation of life. If there were no pain, we would none of us be alive. Pain is the red light on the track of life. It is a danger signal. It is the warning which the body gives of danger ahead.

The amoeba is the lowest known form of animal life. It is simply a one-celled sac of protoplasm. It gets its food by surrounding it. If good food is offered to an amoeba, it will stretch itself toward the food. If a poison is put before it, it will draw back. Too bad we haven't as much sense as the amoeba.

Headache is pain in the head. It is a warning that something is wrong somewhere. The trouble is to find the cause.

You wake up in the morning with a headache. It may be due to indigestion. Something you ate yesterday has disagreed with you. You may be suffering from constipation and be poisoned by the absorption of waste products that should have been cast out. You may have overtaxed your eyes. Whatever the cause, you know that your head hurts and you want it stopped.

So you go to the medicine closet and get out your favorite headache tablet, pill or powder. You don't know what's in it or how it works, but you know that if you take enough of it, the headache will stop.

An equally sensible way would be to have some one hit you on the head with a piece of lead pipe. That would stop the headache, but it might also stop you, permanently. So will the "headache cure," only it will take a little longer.

Any drug which is powerful enough to stop a headache without removing the cause is powerful enough to hurt you. Most of the popular "headache remedies" contain some kind of coal-tar product. They may stop the pain, but they are practically all of them dangerous heart depressants.

What would you think of a railroad engineer who got off his engine and smashed the red light with a club. You wouldn't want to ride on his train, would you?

That's what you are doing when you kill the headache with drugs. A headache is a warning to you that you are doing or have done something which your body protests against. Find out what it is and stop doing it. Don't smash the danger signal with a club.

Enviably Immunity

To the envy of the shoplifter, time steals on and cannot be arrested.

Fair Sex Not Only Possessor of "Moods"

Margery had made a deep impression on Dick. It was a little surprising to me because Dick is generally rather critical of women. I asked him why he liked Margery so much.

"She realizes that men have moods," he replied. He would say no more, but reflecting on his remark I realized how much it revealed and how much it concealed, writes Lettice Wayne in the London Mail.

"Moods" in men or women long ago ceased to be fashionable. They exist, of course, for although we can learn to control our moods so that they do not become a nuisance to other people few of us can prevent our unaccountable depressions or elations. But among many women there still endures the belief that to experience quick changes of emotions, to awaken one day with a cheerful heart, to rise next day strangely unhappy, is a peculiarly feminine weakness. It is only the wisest of women, however, who extend such comprehension to men.

What an enormous difference it makes to the success of the relationship between a man and a woman if the man knows that the woman appreciates that he is not altogether immune from the weakness of "moodiness." It is the strength of man that he is able as a rule to hide his emotions, to maintain a reasonable level of cheerfulness and consideration for others. And, perhaps, just because he has so long accustomed himself to control his feelings, he finds it very delightful when the companionship of a woman makes it plain to him that the mask is not always effective.

It is only the unselfish woman who does not seek always to be amused who knows when a man is "moody." Responsive silence, or gentle sympathy, the tactful adaptation of her own mood to his, may touch a chord in the man's heart, and be the beginning of a long romance.

Appeals to Old and Young

Florida has two new assets to add to its bid for popularity. First, the California earthquake. Second, a pirate ship, remarks Grove Patterson in the Columbus Dispatch.

An old pirate ship was discovered twelve feet underground in Sarasota, Fla. It stirs the blood of youth, if you have any. Do childish adventures of the mind still play about pirate ships? They used to. A boy who never wanted to be a pirate probably never wanted to do anything. It is as inevitable to want to sail on a pirate ship as it is to want to be conductor on a train. If they find any more pirate ships in Florida we'll all get the fever.

Harp Lotes Eminence

Tara's famous harp is disappearing and fast becoming but a memory. At the recent Fels Cecil at Dublin, the festival to which Ireland's budding musicians come annually to submit themselves to tests set by eminent adjudicators—there was only one entrant for the harp competition and only one, also, in the competition for a song with harp accompaniment. It is explained that the harp is at a disadvantage as compared with the violin and other instruments of smaller bulk, since it is not easily portable for private entertainments, and being essentially an instrument of the individual, it can never hope to find a place as an item of household equipment as does the piano. But whatever the reason, the fact remains that the harp is becoming almost as extinct in Ireland as are the snakes banished by St. Patrick.

Fertile Imagination

Frances, four years old, came running to her mother and hid in her skirts. Mother, surprised, asked the cause of her fright.

"I was telling myself a story I was making up," explained Frances, "and there were wolves in it—and—and I got scared!"

Apricots by the Yard.

There seems to be nothing in Damascus they cannot turn into a sweet of some kind. The sweetstuffs of Damascus are famous; they are really candied fruits. As the climate is hot, every form of plum, apricot, peach, melon, grape, greengage and nut grows. These are soaked in sugar preparations, and when served they are most luscious. Put in tins or bottles they last for years; but when freshly made they are perfectly delicious, especially the walnuts. For packing, round common wooden boxes are used, quaintly stencilled in Arabic design, and these boxes of dried fruit are sent all over the world, but of course nothing is ever so good when it has been packed as it is when it is freshly made.

SHORT STORY

Writer Uses Irish Warfare For Her Atmosphere.

A historical incident of the warfare in Ireland has been used by Miss Nell Hanson as a basis of a short story in the September McClure's. She has opened up a new field for writers with her stories of "Black and Tan Days" in Ireland.

In an Enemy By Command, the Canadian writer has told the dilemma of a youth on whom the lot fell to murder the Resident Magistrate. And it happened that the Magistrate had befriended the very boy that I. R. A. selected to act as executioner.

The boy was unwilling to make the attempt upon the Magistrate's life, but under his oath he could not withdraw or refuse. So he prepared the ambush and with an unloaded gun appeared on the road. As he expected, he was shot down by the magistrate.

Hungarian Barber Is Heir to 100 Millions

Vienna.—Budapest newspapers state that John Szentpetery, a poor Hungarian barber, has received word from the United States that he has inherited $100,000,000, representing the estate of Major Debossy, who fought as aide de camp side by side with Kossuth in the Hungarian revolution of 1848-49.

After Kossuth escaped to Turkey on the collapse of the revolution against Austria, Debossy fled to the United States and there amassed an enormous fortune, which, upon his death, passed to his sister. The latter recently died and it was found that the poor barber is the only surviving member of the family.

He is an old man now and the news of the vast inheritance seemed to excite him less than it did the people who came to congratulate him.
